Suez Battles Break Truce

Times News Services

Fighting broke out again today along the southern Suez Canal just as the second truce in as many days was taking hold on all Middle East war fronts.

As United Nations observers sped to the fronts to try to preserve the truce, Israel charged that the Egyptian Third Army was trying to break out of its encirclement on both banks of the canal.

A Tel Aviv communique said 15 Egyptian planes had been shot down and fighting was continuing.

Cairo claimed that some of the Mirage fighters taking part in the Canal Zone dogfight belonged to another country, not Israel. The communique did not say to which nation the planes belonged.

Egypt also called on the United States and the Soviet Union today to send troops to the Suez Canal front to help enforce the Middle East ceasefire, according to Cairo radio.

The broadcast said President Anwar Sadat sent messages to President Nixon and Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev to dispatch forces because Israel "was continuing its aggression on both banks" of the Suez Canal.

Israel and Egypt continued to trade charges in addition to shots.

In sharply-contrasting statements, Israel said Egypt's army was disintegrating in surrenders and Egypt claimed control of most of the Suez Canal.

Egypt charged Israeli violations of the ceasefire and said Egyptian troops had been forced to respond.

On the northern end of the canal, however, and in Syria, the truce appeared to be holding.

There is widespread uncertainty as to what happens next.

Nor is there any word how peace talks specified in the United Nations truce resolution sponsored by the United States and Russia will take place.

The most violent argument between China and the Soviet Union ever seen in the Security Council almost overshadowed passage of the resolution Tuesday night calling for the reinstatement of the ceasefire.

The exchange grew so heated that the session had to be suspended for about 20 minutes to allow tempers to cool.

The verbal battle erupted when Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua objected strongly to a proposal by Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik for an immediate vote on the resolution.

He said a Chinese text of the draft was not even available, and insisted on continuing to address the Council although a proposal for an immediate vote usually takes precedence over other business.

The Chinese minister praised the "brilliant victories" which he said had been won by the forces of Egypt, Syria and the Palestinian people.

The "two super powers," on the other hand, had played "a most ignominious role" throughout.

The Soviet Union provided the Arabs with arms, "not to give true support, but to control the development of the Middle East situation so it will not go beyond the limit it has agreed with the other super power."

China again refused to participate in the vote. It termed the two ceasefire resolutions frauds and "scraps of paper" concocted in secret by "the two super-powers."

UN sources said the first group of truce observers moved into the field today, but they will not be going to their old positions along the canal.

The observers — from Sweden, England, Argentina, Ireland, Austria, France, Canada, Australia, Chile and Italy — will be redeployed in positions reflecting the new battlefield stance of the two armies.

Just before the second truce came into effect. Tel Aviv said its troops had made key gains surrounding Egyptian forces in the southern Sinai and cutting off Egypt's major petroleum port from the rest of the country.

UFOs? Ticket Them!

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit police have a full-fledged plan on the handling of creatures from unidentified flying objects.

A special group of officers has received the go-ahead to stop and frisk all aliens from other planets that are in the city or in the air space above.

In addition, the police can ticket creatures who attempt to flee or vanish.

In a seven-point departmental memo, Detroit's eight field duty inspectors were given detailed instructions on how to care for UFOs, their passengers and-or crews.

The top priority item said get them to the ground even if a bullhorn or public address system must be used. The next order of business was the traditional ticket for fleeing saucers, but with the proper copy of the citation to have on hand for future court appearances.

Diplomatic immunity for passengers or crew members of UFOs from alien planets was also required, including the separation of males and females for questioning.

Barrett To Alta. For Gas

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrett will make an emergency trip to Edmonton to arrange with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed for alternative supplies of natural gas to ease this province's crisis shortage.

Barrett told the legislature Tuesday he would go to Alberta in the wake of refusal by the federal government to restrict exports of B.C. natural gas to U.S. customers, as the provincial government has demanded.

The first indication he would go east to secure a new source of natural gas for the province's industrial users came during debate in the house Tuesday of legislation setting up a powerful new petroleum corporation with authority to control the production and processing of natural gas and petroleum resources in the province.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald urged Barrett to go, saying direct contact with Lougheed is needed for B.C. to be able to get Alberta gas.

The natural gas shortage being felt in the province is the result of production problems encountered by Westcoast Transmission Company Limited, the principal supplier of natural gas in B.C.

Westcoast has announced a cutback program to all its customers averaging between 10 and 12 per cent with the reduction going as high as 25 to 30 per cent on some days.

The effect on industrial users of the natural gas shortage is potentially disastrous with losses of up to $20 million and 250,000 man-days caused by plant shutdowns predicted for this winter if alternative supplies are not found.

Supplies in Alberta are available from two sources.

Oil Coats Park Beach

Oil up to two inches thick coated part of Stanley Park's shoreline today after an estimated 20 tons of bunker oil spilled into Vancouver harbor from the German-registered freighter Westfalia.

The spill, at Centennial Pier No. 4, was reported to Vancouver harbor master Capt. Roy Holland at 3:41 a.m.

A spokesman for Clean Seas of Canada said the firm was alerted to start a cleanup and contain the spill at 3:46 a.m.

But by 10:30 a.m. oil had coated some areas of the park's shoreline between Deadman Island and the Nine O'Clock Gun.

Oil was also reported off Lumbermen's Arch and the Clean Seas' spokesman said there were also unconfirmed reports of oil blobs in English Bay.

A thin sheen of oil was also visible east toward the Lion's Gate Bridge.

A crew of 25 men was attempting to clean the park's shoreline by hand and four tugs, hauling booms, were operating about 100 feet off Lumbermen's Arch.

The Clean Seas spokesman said the Westfalia was boomed off but a quantity of oil apparently escaped the immediate pier area as a result of a 15 to 20 mile-per-hour easterly wind whipping across the harbor.

"Conditions were very bad," he said.

A spokesman for Balfour Guthrie, agents for the Westfalia, said the oil apparently escaped from an air vent on the deck and spilled over the side into the sea.

He said the vent leads to one of the ship's oil tanks.

"It doesn't amount to very much, as far as we are concerned," he said.

A ministry of transport official said about a mile of the park's beach was affected. He said an aerial survey would be carried out to trace the movement of the crude bunker oil.

Ferry Contract To Seattle Firm

By LINDA HUGHES
Timesd Staff

Three new ferries, designed by a Seattle firm and costing a total of $35 million, will be operating in B.C. Ferries fleet by the summer of 1975. (See picture on Page 3.)

Transport Minister Robert Strachan said today a contract has been awarded for the design of two 376-car ferries and a trailer ferry capable of handling 64 commercial vehicles or 154 cars.

The two car ferries, expected to cost $13 million each, will be used on the proposed new Gabriola Island-Lower Mainland run, and the $9 million trailer ferry will provide 24-hour service on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run.

Nickum and Spaulding Associates Ltd. of Seattle were awarded the $577,500 design contract and have agreed to complete designs ready for construction tenders in two months.

The ships, all 457 feet in length, will be built in B.C. shipyards, Strachan said, and will involve nearly 900 jobs.

Strachan has been under fire in recent weeks from opposition members who predicted the design contract would go to the Seattle firm and demanded to know why Case Existological Laboratories of Victoria would not be given the lucrative contract.

Strachan was quick to outline to reporters today three reasons why the government decided against the Victoria firm, which was asked to submit a bid along with Nickum and Spaulding.

Time was an important factor, the minister said, and Case said it would take six months to draw up the de-

MONTREAL — Quebec government documents on the province's gross national product and its balance of trade and payments show that Quebec has been a net exporter of capital and has received less from the federal government than it has paid in taxes, the Parti Quebecois claimed Tuesday. (See also Page 36.)

Party leader Rene Levesque and party economist Jacques Parizeau told a news conference that documents obtained from the provincial department of industry and commerce prove an independent Quebec would be a viable economic unit.

The documents, however, tell only part of the story, says Industry Minister Guy Saint-Pierre.

Their figures conflict with another government study and still have to be checked.

Nixon Delays Speech on TV

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today cancelled a planned televised speech to the nation because the White House said he was concentrating on trying to get a Middle East ceasefire.

He will hold a televised news conference Thursday night instead. Nixon had earlier scheduled a national address on Watergate developments and asked for TV time tonight.

The president spent the night at his Camp David retreat, reportedly preparing the speech explaining his decision to relinquish his Watergate recordings and his reasons for firing Archibald Cox as Watergate special prosecutor.

However, deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren later said Nixon spent Tuesday evening conferring by telephone with State Secretary Henry Kissinger and others on the attempt to arrange a firm Middle East ceasefire.

This took up the time that the President had set aside to write his speech, Warren added.

Nixon met Kissinger shortly after his return to Washington today and Warren said he would be devoting the balance of the day to the Middle East.

Meanwhile, the House of Representatives continued today a preliminary impeachment inquiry, begun Tuesday just before Nixon's lawyers announced that the tapes would be given to a federal judge.

House leaders said the inquiry will continue at least

GAS BILL PASSES HURDLE

The NDP government, acting to avert a major natural gas shortage this winter, won approval in principle to legislation allowing for the control of all gas and oil supplies produced in B.C.

Leading debate on the Petroleum Corporation Act (Bill 70), which passed second reading 32 to 15, Premier Dave Barrett and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald reiterated past declarations the people of B.C. are entitled to a fair return on their resources.

Opposition reaction was generally negative with arguments put forward that once again too much power is being concentrated in the hands of a government-appointed body.

Both Barrett and Macdonald said the province is losing as much as $100 million a year because of an underpricing of natural gas sold to foreign interests. The new petroleum corporation would be empowered to do something about this by raising the wellhead price of the resource, to 58 cents per thousand cubic feet instead of the present 37 cents.

Macdonald said decisions affecting the economic development of B.C. have been made for too long in the board rooms of foreign corporations.

Barrett was even more blunt. "It is our resource and we must husband that resource for the benefit of the people of B.C., it's as simple as that."

Immigrant Deadline Stays

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will not extend the period under which illegal immigrants may seek landed-immigrant status, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

The special 60-day period when illegal immigrants could make application for landed status ended Oct. 15 but Andras received representations from inside and outside the Commons for an extension.

The minister said that 33 applications for landed status were received after the deadline. He said some were permitted for compassionate reasons but added that this should not be taken as an extension of the 60-day period.

Asked if illegal immigrants now will be deported, Andras said the law will be enforced.

But outside the House, Mr. Andras assured reporters there would not be a witch hunt to track down illegal immigrants.

NOOSE BAN STAYS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons voted 119 to 106 today to limit capital punishment to killers of on-duty policemen and prison guards for another five years.

The vote was free, meaning MPs were not tied to party loyalties.

The proposal now needs only Senate approval and routine royal assent to become law.

A similar hanging ban was approved in 1967 and expired last December. In sometimes dramatic sittings, the Commons spent more than 50 hours since January debating the government bill to extend the ban.

It had been obvious from the start that the government headed by Prime Minister Trudeau wanted to end all capital punishment.

But it realized early that the best it could hope for was renewal of the previous five-year ban.

Right up until the vote it was not certain it would get even that.

B.C. Rail Workers Voting

Close to 400 B.C. Rail tradesmen were voting today on a recommended settlement to their 10-day strike. If they accept the new contract, trains could be running Thursday.

No details of the tentative settlement, arrived at in negotiations late Tuesday, were released but union leaders recommended acceptance.

Premier Barrett, who is also president of B.C. Rail, told a cheering legislature at 6 p.m. Tuesday of the tentative settlement.

He said renewed negotiations, set up earlier in the day, had brought about the tentative agreement.

The 383 carmen, machinists, electricians and pipefitters were on strike to improve an offer ranging between 35.8 and 38 per cent over 31 months from last Jan. 1. That offer would have brought a journeyman's wage to $6.10 an hour.

TWO CAN PAY —BUILDER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada says builders are justified in charging high prices for houses because most families have two pay cheques and can afford the price.

Keith Morely also said immediate removal of federal and provincial sales taxes on building materials would not cut the price of a new house because "the main factor in the price is the demand."

BROKE HIJACKERS GROUNDED

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Four airplane hijackers, promised safe conduct to Cuba in exchange for releasing their hostages, wound up in custody today because they couldn't come up with the money to buy airline tickets to Havana.

A government spokesman said the safe conduct guarantee did not include cash for the flight out of Bolivia.

The four hijackers, two men and two women claiming to be members of the Uruguay's urban guerrilla Tupamaro movement, were told they were free to leave the country Tuesday when they released five hostages from the Aerolinas Argentinas Boeing 737 jetliner they hijacked over Argentina.

The airliner arrived Saturday at Yacubia, 500 miles from the Argentine border. After 53 hours of negotiations, in which they released 38 of the passengers and crew but threatened to kill the remaining five, the hijackers agreed to release their hostages for the safe conduct pledge.

Until they find the money to buy airline tickets, officials said Tuesday, the four will stay in a military camp in La Paz under heavy guard.

Bolivian officials said the four commandeered the plane over Salta, Argentina, by threatening to blow it up with plastic bombs later found to be fakes filled with wastepaper. But the hijackers were armed with three small revolvers and a rifle.

. . . OIL BILL

From now on, Barrett said, the government is going to require that foreign customers wanting B.C.'s natural gas will pay the full price for that resource instead of the "fire prices" being charged.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) called the bill a "smokescreen" the government is using to cover its real intent which, he said, is to take over the entire petroleum industry.

He urged the government negotiate a short-term agreement with Alberta which would see the prairie province give some of its surplus gas to B.C. in exchange for a similar favor at some later time.

David Anderson, Liberal leader, saaid all the government has done in the last year is interfere with the natural gas industry and that no contingency plans have been developed, with the result that the province is not able to properly deal with the crisis which has developed over the natural gas shortage.

He urged fuller consultation between the provincial and federal governments.

Scott Wallace, Progressive Conservative interim leader, said a petroleum corporation taking "total and complete control" of the processing and production of natural gas is not an appropriate way for the government to deal with the problem.

He said the government has given itself powers which, although it says it does not plan to use, remain on the books nevertheless and can be used at any time.

Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver—Point Grey) said the NDP government is following exactly the same energy policy carried out by the previous Social Credit government.

"This is the same sorry state of affairs we had for so many years with the former administration," he said, accusing both of "greed" in selling B.C.'a resources to the U.S.

Don Phillips (SC South Peace River) said the bill would do nothing to alleviate the problem and urged the government to simply renegotiate the price of gas.

"If it had not been for the sale of natural gas to the U.S.," he said, "there would not be a pipeline out of the Peace River today."

And if there was a pipeline with no U.S. sales, the price of gas in B.C. would "three of four" times higher than it is today, Phillips said.

. . . B.C. ASKS ALBERTA FOR GAS SUPPLY the Pan-Alberta Gas Company to this province.

The problem with this gas source is that it will cost substantially more than the natural gas now being used by B.C.'s industrial users. The cost would be 44 cents per thousand cubic feet (MCF), compared to 13 cents per MCF now being paid.

The other problem is that the pipeline extension could not be operative before Dec. 15 and likely not before the end of the year.

The second alternative is through Alberta and Southern Gas Company, which could supply natural gas to Westcoast Transmission's U.S. customers, leaving Westcoast free to maintain supplies to B.C. industrial users.

The problem with this alternative is that it requires the approval of both the American Federal Power Commission and the Canadian National Energy Board, which could take as long as four months.

The provincial government regards both these alternatives as "unattractive" compared to the action it would like to see taken. This is to have the federal government, through the National Energy Board, "turn down the taps" of exported natural gas going out of B.C. so that the province's domestic needs can be properly taken care of.

Only the federal government has the authority to control the volume of natural gas exports. But Ottawa has not gone along with B.C.'s demand for this action.

As a result, the provincial government has begun to push through the Petroleum Corporation Act for house approval. Second reading of the legislation (approval in principle) was given Tuesday night and it is anticipated clause-by-clause consideration will begin today or Thursday.

Macdonald told reporters Tuesday the government may call in Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen next week to give royal assent to the legislation after it is given third reading.

Macdonald said little about what effect creation of the corporation will have on the solving of the natural gas shortage, other than that "it's usefulness will be made apparent in the next week or so."

It is believed the corporation is necessary before the government can sign any agreements with Alberta for a short-term supply of natural gas.

Macdonald told the house Tuesday the government is "moving as quickly as possible" to arrange for the northern pipeline route for natural gas from Pan Alberta Gas Company.

It is necessary that arrangements be made quickly, he said, because Westcoast Transmission has already begun 8 per cent cutbacks on its natural gas supplies.

The effect has not yet been felt by Pacific Northern Gas Company and Inland Natural Gas company, two distributors in the northern interior, but the cutbacks are being applied to B.C. Hydro and El Paso Natural Gas, Westcoast's other customers.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said he and U.S. presidential energy adviser John Love agree there is a problem concerning a natural gas shortage in B.C.

He said no major decisions arose out of the talks but that Ottawa was still hoping to arrange alternative supplies through Alberta.

Reports that oil tankers are being diverted from Canadian destinations by oil companies has prompted a stiffly-worded telegram to major companies from Donald Macdonald.

"Given the uncertainties about oil supply to Eastern Canada, such diversions are clearly against the interest of Canadians and I would express to you most strongly my objections to any such practice," tre telegram said.

Oil industry sources indicated in Calgary Monday that diversion of tankers to U.S. ports from their Canadian destinations began in September as a ploy to circument Arab restrictions on the direct flow of oil to the U.S.

Less than 900,000 barrels of oil is coming into this country every day and the total is not enough to satisfy Canadian refineries that require more than a million barrels daily.

Also Donald Mcdonald took a firm Canada-first position in his talks with Love.

Macdonald told a news conference later there is no immediate reason to reduce the more than one million barrels of crude oil Canada exports to the United States daily, but Canada intends to place its own needs first.

Love, who appeared with Macdonald at the news conference, said the U.S. has no fundamental objection to the more restrictive Canadian attitude, but differences of opinion could be expected.

. . . NIXON DELAYS

until the effects of Nixon's action become known.

It was clear, however, that initial reaction to the president's reversal was favorable.

"Thank God," said Senator Barry Goldwater (Rep. Ariz.).

"I'm glad it came to pass," said Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss.

Wall Street's Dow-Jones industrial average jumped 17 points in less than an hour on news of Nixon's decision.

The house met for only four hours Tuesday, but within that time eight resolutions calling for impeachment of Nixon were introduced.

In addition, 13 resolutions calling for a committee of inquiry to look into the question of whether impeachable charges had been committed — a preliminary step before actual impeachment proceedings were introduced in the same time.

The ranking Democratic member of the House judiciary committee, Rep. Harold Donahue (Dem. — Mass.), said "the crisis in national confidence . . . nothwithstanding his late-hour agreement to release the tapes . . . leaves the Congress no choice other than to immediately inquire into the existence of sufficient grounds for presidential impeachment."

Jerome Waldie (Dem. Calif.), author of one of the eight impeachment resolutions, insisted that an inquiry should be undertaken.

"I'm persuaded that the special prosecutor was on the trail of other affairs that came uncomfortably close to the president," he said.

Waldie and other critics of Nixon insisted the House judiciary committee should proceed to investigate whether Nixon's actions constitute the "high crimes and misdemeanors" which the constitution specifies as grounds for impeachment.

In Los Angeles, John Ehrlichman's defence attorney said Tuesday he will try to get at the Nixon tapes to "establish a direct line of presidential authority" for the operation that included breaking into the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Both the prosecution and defence said Tuesday that Nixon's capitulation on the tape issue opens the way for possible use of the recordings in the pending trial of Ehrlichman and three other former White House aides.

YOUTHS HUNTED

Saanich police are searching for several unidentified youths seen abandoning a car after it collided with five parked cars on Carey Road today near Mt. View secondary school.

The youths lead police on a chase through underbrush in the area after the pile-up occurred.

Although it has not been confirmed that the car was stolen, police report it was started after someone had hot-wired it.

Damage has not yet been estimated.

signs compared to the two-month Seattle bid.

The Case bid was for $682,000, more than $10,000 more than the Seattle firm, he said, and Nickum and Spaulding also have several of their ferry designs already operating in local waters for the government to examine.

Asked if it would still have been more profitable to award the contract to the Victoria firm on the grounds of increased revenue and jobs for B.C. citizens, Strachan said there is a rule that the government allows a certain "leeway" in awarding contracts to provincial companies but all factors taken together made it impossible in this case.

He said nine of the 24 ferries in the existing B.C. fleet are based on Nickum and Spaulding designs drawn up in 1959 for the Queen of Tsawwassen and the Queen of Sidney.

The two new car ferries will carry almost twice the cars carried by stretched ferries now in service and, with a 20-knot capacity, will be able to cross the straits in almost half the time.

The Tsawwassen-Swartz Bay run and the Nanaimo-Horseshoe Bay run take an hour and 40 minutes and an hour and 50 minutes respectively.

Strachan said he expects the run from Gabriola Island to an as yet undesignated lower mainland terminal will take 50 minutes.

The new ferries are double-ended, with two bridges eliminating all turnaround manoeuvres and saving 10 to 15 minutes each run.

With three new ferries in operation all ferry routes will be upgraded, Strachan said. The Sunshine Coast and Powell River-Comox services will likely be upgraded for example with the addition of older ferries taken off the two major runs.

the weather

Cloud has been fairly general overnight along with fog in central interior valleys. Some rain is expected in the southern interior today with showers in the north coast. Some improvement is expected behind this current system off the south coast and Thursday will see some sunshine in most regions except the north coast where more rain is expected in conjunction with a disturbance moving into the Gulf of Alaska. Temperatures will remain much the same.

We put $80 worth of time, skill, cloth and fashion touches into each jacket. Then we sell it for $69.50

Then before you buy one, go to another store and try on a few of theirs.

You're going to find that any other jacket that feels, fits or looks as good as ours, is going to cost you at least $80.00.

This season, Tip Top cloth buyers have brought back tweeds, saxonies and shetlands. (Beefy but not heavy.)

Many in colourful checks. (Contrasty but not loud.) Others in herringbone, barley corn and neat houndstooth.

Then our tailors have cut the lapels wide (but not wing-like). The pockets are flapped or patched or both. The vents are on the side or in the centre.

EXTRA BUS SOUGHT

Saanich school board has authorized its chairman, Rubymay Parrott, to appeal to Education Minister Eileen Dailly for help in easing the district's busing problems.

Current bus scheduling is causing some students to leave home around 7 a.m., which makes too long a day for them, Parrott said today.

"Some of them get to school almost an hour before the schools open," she said.

"Some of the parents are concerned, and I feel justifiably so," said Parrott.

Children in the north end of the district are affected the most, she said.

"It just boils down to the fact that we need another bus," Mrs. Parrott said.

CONCEPTUAL design of new ferries to be built for the B.C. Ferries fleet was revealed today by Transport Minister Robert Strachan. Two 376-car ferries and a trailer ferry able to hold 64 commercial vehicles and 154 cars will be designed by a Seattle firm and built in B.C. shipyards at a total cost of $35 million.

Fishing Ban Slapped On Lower Cowichan

The federal fisheries department has slapped a fishing ban on the lower Cowichan River, including a section through reserve lands where Indian protesters built a weir last month.

A department spokesman said from Vancouver today the closure, roughly from Duncan to the river mouth, was prompted by unusually low water conditions which have held up the Spring salmon run.

It went into effect Sunday and prohibits both food fishing with spears by Indians and sports fishing, he said. The objective is to protect the Springs until sufficient, possibly about 10,000, have reached their spawning beds in the upper river.

The Indian demonstrators, who built the weir to protest regulations they say prevent them from catching enough salmon to feed their families, have not used their weir for about two weeks.

A spokesman, Gordon Elliott, said earlier it was ineffective because of low water and the Indians did not want to jeopardize negotiations now under way with the fisheries department on Indian fishing rights. The department has warned the demonstrators the weir is illegal.

The ban will continue until rain improves the river level and enough salmon reach the spawning beds, he said.

Elford Challenged For Regional Post

Ald. John Goult of Oak Bay will challenge Mayor Frances Elford for the municipality's position on the Capital Regional Board.

Elford, seeking her third term as mayor, confirmed today she will run for a seat on the regional board.

"I don't think that someone can be mayor and a director of the regional board at the same time," said Goult, "It is now wielding vast power and toting up an extremely substantial budget."

Designation of land for parks is one of the regional board's functions, said Goult, and could be offering more assistance to municipalities for acquiring land for parks.

Halfway through his second term as alderman, Goult is a member of Jubilee Hospital Board.

Tunnel 'Safe'

The tunnel which collapsed at Clover Point Friday killing John Jardim appeared to be safe, an inquest conducted by Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre was told Tuesday.

Joe Lima, 1852 Chestnut, Jardim's brother-in-law, told the inquest there was no indication the eight-foot high sewer tunnel was about to cave in.

Lima was at the tunnel site, but not in the section which collapsed.

Another worker at the site, Manuel Daluz, 585 John, also said there were no signs of stress in the tunnel.

"It looked strong enough to keep going," he said.

The Testing Fires

What began as a bit of election campaign chicanery many months ago in Washington has now passed through increasingly serious phases to a point where the presidency of the United States is at stake. This week's developments, with President Nixon retracting his refusal to deliver his private White House tapes to the court, has established precedents in United States history and brought a new definition of the relationship between the presidency, the courts and Congress.

In each instance in which he has given ground before the insistence of determined men to enforce the constitutional law, or in deference to a "fire storm" of public protest and indignation, Mr. Nixon has shown that he and his advisers had greatly misjudged and under-rated the reaction of the public to threats against the basic liberties of the judicial system and the democratic form of government. Also, in each instance of his televised appeals to the nation, he has sought to establish the national good, the people's interests, the security and future of the country and its international prestige as the reasons for his actions. Mr. Spiro Agnew, in departing from the political scene to settle his debts to the law, cited similar high-minded motives for his actions.

These virtuous stances are losing their appeal to the people. A common reaction is to dismiss the speaker's words as lies. The protestations of personal concern for the national honor are, because of their context, bringing the incumbents' high offices into as low a state as the original questionable actions which precipitated the whole train of sordid events.

The longer the Washington investigations, court moves and White House efforts continue, the more weaknesses, dishonesties and participants are revealed. Friends of the United States, equally with the people of that country, can only hope that the tragic charade will end soon, as the characters stumble from one error to another and the pressing business of the country is endangered.

Unfortunately, events have gone too far now to be halted before the whole sorry mess is revealed, judged and settled for good. Repercussions of the events of the past few months will be felt for many years in United States domestic life. Let us hope that in the international field the internal problems of the world's leading democracy will not result, through default or incapacity, in serious shortcomings in Western strength in the crucial affairs of today's world — the disarmament talks, the Middle East settlement, the global economic and monetary problems, and the emerging crises in energy fuels, food production and population density.

These are not days in which little men can successfully administer great nations; the big decisions can not be made in a welter of petty personal strivings and cross purposes. Morality does count, as the public temper keeps insisting, whether it be the guiding principle of one man or a million.

Three Men at the Top

In a world beset by wars, inflation and unemployment the death in recent days of three human beings who vastly enriched this world went relatively unnoticed. Composer Pablo Casals, undoubtedly the greatest cellist of this century, died Monday in his adopted homeland of Puerto Rico. Even in his nineties Mr. Casals would be assisted on stage, nod to the world's greatest orchestras, and launch into memorable performances. He was a giant in the world of music and beyond it.

In another context, Gene Krupa, the gum-chewing drummer who leaped to international fame in 1939 playing with Benny Goodman's orchestra at the famous New York Carnegie Hall concerts, last week played his final rim shot. Almost singlehandedly Mr. Krupa changed jazz drumming from a tedious time-keeping chore to an art and a science.

Still farther afield, Walt Kelly, creater of the comic strip character Pogo, entertained millions with one of the few humorous cartoon strips still in existence. Mr. Kelly penetratingly caricatured presidents, governors, bigots and anyone else who raised his ire. He was an important commentator at current events. During the 1960s some southern U.S. papers banned the strip because of its liberal racial views.

Cellists, drummers and cartoonists rate few footnotes in mankind's history, yet the generations who knew these three men and their widely differentiated arts will be saddened, as if good friends died.

Scaling Down the Cities

When John Henry Cardinal Newman, said growth is the only evidence of life, the world was a much simpler place in which to live. In the modern world philosophic soothsaying has a way of crumbling as new technologies pop up, and only basic physical laws such as Isaac Newton's or Boyle's resist the erosion of time.

The world's great metropolitan centres illustrate the change in emphasis brought about by burgeoning technology and the ills of overcrowding. While many cities throughout the world have departments that specialize in bringing new industry and business to their respective areas, the larger centres are discouraging such centralization. In London, for example, government has created a Location of Offices Bureau for the express purpose of helping business re-locate somewhere outside of the city. And with office space going for as much as $50 per foot some private enterprise doesn't need much urging.

In Moscow, where persuasion and enticement are not used, the government has simply ordered 200 state firms to re-locate in rural areas because of the growing pollution in that city, and perhaps for strategic reasons as well. And even in that bastion of the growth syndrome, New York City, the latest census records a net decrease in population.

Beyond a certain optimum size — as Tokyo is finding out — cities become unmanageable. If Victoria doesn't have this kind of problem in the foreseeable future, the plight of the great metropoli should at least reaffirm this community's concern about uncontrolled growth.

Maoism: Almost a Religion

YENAN, China — Maoism holds a position in contemporary China which is the equivalent of both political doctrine and ideology, almost a religion. The new party constitution specifically defines "Marxism-Leninism-Mao Tse-tung thought as the theoretical basis guiding its thinking." A plenum agreed: "Mao Tse-tung's thought should be taken as the guide for action."

Chairman Mao (as everyone respectfully calls him) has written several works, some not yet published. His mottoes, strategy, policy guidelines, dogma are familiar to most Chinese. "Go all out and aim high," he is quoted on a huge placard at airports. "Dig deep," he advises the vast network of tunnelled air raid shelters. "Store grain," he tells peasant communes.

Enormous Photographs

His enormous photograph is widely displayed on a larger scale than the familiar Communist quartet: Marx, Engels, Lenin, Stalin, generally all alone. In the first Central Committee headquarters built outside this town in 1942, where Mao ran meetings, played ping-pong and chess with delegates and elaborated theory, his picture dwarfs other Marxist heroes.

Chairman Mao himself has acknowledged there is political use in such a personality cult and told the late Edgar Snow that Krushchev probably fell because he had none. As Alain Peyrefitte, the French parliamentarian, perceptively points out, Maoism is not just a theory but essentially a method. It has to be lived. It also has to be related to the ancient Chinese thought patterns, above all yin and yang, the positive and negative that make up any whole.

Intellectually, Mao Tse-tung's thoughts have not been codified sufficiently to weigh their philosophical import. His strategic teachings, derived from Clausewitz via Lenin and then modified, have had major importance. His political doctrine of a continuing revolution may prove as significant, over the decades, as his military doctrine of revolutionary warfare.

But one realizes here that despite the Chinese personality's pragmatic aspect, there is another aspect of Maoism which the West would call religious. He himself is not devout and, as a youth, sided with his unbelieving father against his Buddhist mother whom he otherwise preferred.

. . . another aspect

All the old faiths are rarely practised, even Confucianism, which was not quite a creed but more a practical philosophy. Nevertheless, Marxism, Chinese-style, has become a faith and Mao Tse-tung is its prophet.

The Chairman has shown himself an earthy, common-sensical man and yet he is audacious in the revolutionary sense of Danton. He argues: "Don't be afraid to make trouble . . . confusion and trouble are always noteworthy." He once exuberantly proclaimed: "It will be intolerable if after several decades we are not the greatest nation on earth."

Practical Heritage

But apart from this eminently practical heritage to which Maoism is historically related, there is its religious aspect. Jean-Francois Billeter stresses this in a study of China's beliefs. This points out that Confucianism (now under attack) "was above all a moral system and a political ideology, that of the scholar-official class." This is perhaps why Confucius is now being criticized as "reactionary." As Billeter writes, Confucianism was "an ideology of the ruling class."

In China, traditional theology was less preoccupied than elsewhere with metaphysics. The logic practised is unusual to a Westerner. There is less interest in quests for abstract truth than in practical application of wisdom. I would venture to say this is the kernel of Maoist thought.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Discrimination

For the second time in a few weeks we have read in the newspapers where a naked young lady has appeared at, and in, the Parliament buildings, presumably seeking justice in this great democracy.

I would like to point out that many government workers are not employed in the main government building facing Belleville Street, where the nudes appeared. Civil servants are scattered all over town, often far from where the action is.

Myself, I work in the Dogwood Building at 1019 Wharf Street. None of us here has had the opportunity to witness democracy at work, as outlined above. We are hard-working government people and are as deserving as those in the main building. Justice for all, sir!

That address again: 1019 Wharf Street. — B. J. Pauls, 2-117 Medana St.

No Hazard?

The letter of Mr. J. M. Macdonald in the Victoria Times (Aug. 27, 1973) inspires me to ask whether he realizes that the Canadian type of nuclear power station does not generate any high-level wastes at all. This is an American problem, not a Canadian problem. They process their fuel — we do not. Our nuclear power industry does not have any tanks of high-level wastes.

Our expended fuel does contain plutonium — inside the fuel cladding. It is stored under water. If by some process that I find difficult to imagine it somehow got out into the ground it would still not be a serious hazard. Plutonium is so strongly held onto the soil that nobody has been able to demonstrate any movement through the soil. It is quite incredible to me that any large amount of plutonium could get out of the storage tank through steel and concrete without anybody noticing that something had gone wrong.

The hazard from plutonium is an airborne hazard. Certainly someone could drop an atomic bomb near enough to a nuclear station to do a lot of damage, but if we got involved in nuclear warfare we would be worrying — if we survived to worry — about things other than radioactive contamination from nuclear "waste." We would be worrying about contamination from the bombs.

Perhaps we should all return to burning wood. Then the worry would be about benzpyrene, dibensanthracene and other cancer-producing substances in wood smoke. Or maybe we would worry about the rapid disappearance of the forests. — C. A. Mawson, Environmental Research Branch, Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

Government Spies

Some readers may have missed reading about the 16-year-old high school student in the state of New Jersey who is suing the FBI for conducting an investigation of her in connection with a letter she wrote seeking information about the Socialist Labor Party for use in a class project on political parties.

After sending the letter, which carried the name of the Socialist Labor Party but the wrong address, an FBI agent visited the girl's high school. The agent asked the principal what the school's interest was in the Socialist Labor Party. When he was told about the project, he left.

The American Civil Liberties Union has filed a class action on behalf of "all American citizens who wish to exercise their rights under the First Amendment to engage in lawful correspondence with minority political parties without being the objects of covert and overt surveillance and interception of the mail . . ."

As Lori Paton, the student involved, put it: "I don't think it's right that people should be investigated just for writing a letter to a political party."

The Socialist Labor Party has been active for many many years and is not subversive. The SLP was here long before the FBI was even heard of. — Nathan Pressman, 12 Catherine Street, Ellenville, New York, U.S.A.

Roaming Animals

In a letter in the Victoria Times of Friday, October 19, mention is made of "the animal population explosion problem" and of the efforts to deal with it.

Without wishing to discourage the well meant remedial steps indicated in the letter and elsewhere, I suggest that a complete and thorough scientific study, adequately financed of course, be undertaken to determine the fundamental cause of the "problem."

Is it possible that such a study might find that when dogs, male and female, roam the streets of the city an increase in the canine (mongrel) population occurs some time later for reasons only obscurely understood? Wonderingly, I ask: would the "problem" arise if the dog owners concerned kept their animals on their own respective premises at all times?

The matter of cats does not seem to be substantially different. Investigation might be made of the feline operas staged frequently during the night in many neighborhood locations. The high-pitched arias disturb our slumbers, as is well known, but does anything else happen while the performances take place. Similarly to the case of the roaming dogs and strangely, too, where the cats are concerned, large numbers of kittens mysteriously appear after a due interval of time. Again wonderingly, I ask: would there be this "explosion" if cat owners prevented these disturbing night (and day) rendezvous of their animals by keeping them at home?

Spayed or not, would not roaming animals still defecate, urinate, ravage gardens and be an intolerable nuisance?

These musings give rise to the thought that there might be no "problem" whatever if there was an animal control by-law in these several parts and if it was rigidly enforced. Or, does this whimsical idea savor too much of — "Commonsense."

Save the Scene

So the beautiful drive through Goldstream is the next due to be sacrificed by the Highways Dept. in their efforts to cover B.C. with tarvia!

Surely the time is overdue for us to have highways people at the helm who can understand that the highways of our immensely scenic province serve many people who are more interested in enjoying a lesiurely and attractive drive than in blasting from A to B (or eternity) in the shortest possible time.

They will tell us that with widening of the Island Highway elsewhere the Goldstream section is going to create a bottleneck. The let's keep it that way! I drive the highway often. In less-attractive stretches I'm glad to move along at 60 miles per hour, but through Goldstream I enjoy a slackened pace and the brief opportunity to enjoy the beauty of the scene. Why, in the name of heaven, should we sacrifice even part of this scene to gain perhaps one minute on a trip?

Equally to be considered are the people who use the area off the road. How will a wider and faster highway affect access to and use of Goldstream Park? This little bit of land is one of Victoria's prime assets. It, too, should not be diminished in attractiveness, naturalness, and usability.

I hope many of your readers will make themselves heard loudly in protest against this proposed widening of the highway through Goldstream. We need Goldstream — unspoiled — far more than we need more highway speed! —J. E. Underhill, 1439 Wende Rd.

Prisons and Prisoners

Did Mrs. Shirley Wilde and other members of the Albert Head Ratepayers Association tour William Head Penitentiary to give it an honest appraisal or did they enter looking for means to reinforce their bias and support their demand that the prison be removed?

It appears that they entered with eyes, minds and hearts closed and would have been appalled by anything less than an underground dungeon.

The food was too good, the living accommodation too nice and not enough men were seen working.

The inmates at William Head are encouraged to take the cooking course and they prepare the meals under professional supervision. They take pride in preparing appetizing meals from the raw material furnished them. Would Mrs. Wilde suggest that they deliberately make the meals unappetizing?

She objects to each convict having a private room without bars or doors. One of the conditions in prisons which has led to violence and riots is overcrowding in small cells with bars on windows and doors. I have heard of no violence or riots at William Head. Many of us find it difficult to accept that prisoners are human and have the same needs and problems we all have. The major difference being how we handle them. Perhaps the reason this is so difficult for us to accept is because it would leave us little basis for our feelings of superiority and self-righteousness.

If there weren't enough men seen working it could be because they are not permitted to do productive labor which will compete with private enterprise. Doing makeshift unproductive labor is demeaning and degrading to any human being. They want to do productive labor. Much of the building of the newer buildings at William Head was done by the inmates. Each year they repair broken toys to be distributed to needy children at Christmas time. William Head inmates built a home for an Indian family on the reserve at Becher Bay.

Removal of the prison will not make it easier for our old age pensioners to survive. We should not work to bring everyone down to the lowest standard of living, rather we should strive to bring everyone up to a decent standard.

Mrs. Wilde said that it would be worth running afoul of the law if you could be assured of making William Head. She ignores the deprivations of years spent there. No option to go if you want to, sexual deprivation, removal from friends and family. I'm sure every inmate there would trade places with her. Would she really be willing to put herself in their place?

Is William Head prison really a danger to the surrounding community? In the history of the prison with thousands of inmates there has only been one instance of violance by an escapee. As a resident of the community I feel safer than I do driving my car on a Friday or Saturday night worrying about being hit by an impaired driver.

I am concerned about my community and I know that all prisoners will someday be released to return to the community. If prison is a brutalizing experience then the community faces much greater dangers from those who return to us brutalized. — Morris Schachter, Pedder Bay Trailer Park.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 24, 1913

The labor commission resumed its sessions this morning, sitting in the members' rooms at the parliament buildings. John Isaac Staples put in a statement with regard to the minimum wage, and urged that the provincial rate should be $3 per day for the white working man. He claimed that no self-respecting man could work under the conditions prevailing in this province. No factory, he contended, should be allowed in a skyscraper, and no industry should be carried on above the third storey. He also urged that only one storey should be allowed in the basements of large blocks.

How Israel Won the War

By JAMES EAYRS

Egypt and Syria, risking everything on their surprise attack, blew it. That is the salient fact about the Fourth Middle Eastern War.

From Syrian operational plans which have fallen into the hands of the Israelis, we now know that the combined attack from Egypt and Syria had been most meticulously planned for months. We now know also, from the same source, that the guiding concept of that plan was the concept of the knockout blow, a re-run of the Six Day War, the roles of Arab and Israeli this time reversed.

Here was no scenario for kamikazes of the desert, no Pearl Harbor of the Middle East. Such analogies are imperfect, as analogies from history always are. When Churchill heard of the Japanese attack he thought "So we have won, after all." Not even the most arrogant among Isaeli generals could have thought as much when, rudely disturbed at fasting and at prayer, he learned on the Day of Atonement that 1,400 enemy tanks were advancing on the Golan Heights and that the army of Egypt was crossing the Suez Canal.

What was to hold them back? On guard for Israel on three fronts — for there is Jordan too — stood a regular army of 11,500 troops, augmented by a quota of conscripts under training. That the fate of Israel was permitted to be decided for perhaps 48 hours by this tiny force — supported, to be sure, by the Israeli Air Force — was neither carelessness nor thoughtlessness, but the product of a policy.

Israel's forces fully mobilized amount to some 300,000. That is fully 10 per cent of Israel's total population, including its Moslem population. To be fully mobilized as a way of life would play havoc with Israel's way of life — to say nothing of its economy.

And so Israeli planners placed their trust in the call to arms, the speedy summoning of reservists from home or job or — as on 6 October — synagogue to a field of battle seldom more distant than a hundred kilometres. Speedy mobilization, complete within 72 hours, was Israel's ultimate — and only — weapon.

The risk, if calculated, was great. But it has been proven worth the gamble. Chaim Herzog, the Israeli general and military analyst, has singled out — correctly — as the key to victory in the Fourth Middle Eastern war "the incredible speed with which Israel's mobilization to the front and deployment of forces took place. One is talking here in terms of large masses of armor. . .

"Indeed, I would say that this will have proved to be one of the outstanding mobilizations in history and could well merit taking its place in history with the army moving by taxi cab to save Paris in the battle of the Marne . . ."

What lessons ought each side to have learned from what has happened?

For Egypt and Syria, the lesson is "Never again." Surprise attack is a once-in-a-generation policy, a once-in-a-lifetime policy. Its victim will not be so easily surprised next time.

That is not to say Egyptians and Syrians will have learned that lesson. For them the writing on history's blackboard may not read "Never again," but rather "One last push." "If only Jordan had joined in . . ." "If only we'd caught the Phantoms on the ground . . ."

For Israel, the lesson is also "Never again." Never again ought an Israeli government to forfeit the advantage of surprise in order to cultivate a world opinion which is not worth having on its side. Never again ought Yom Kippur to distract the national defence. Never again ought Israel to gamble its fate on a successful 72-hour mobilization.

If, as seems likely, the Arabs do not learn their lesson while the Israelis do learn theirs, what chance is there for peace?

Better than it might appear. What is needed now in the Middle East is not a peacekeeping force of the United Nations. What is needed now is a war-preventing force of the two Great Powers most urgently concerned.

The difference between a peacekeeping force like the United Nations Emergency Force (UNEF) and a war-preventing force for which the UN Charter makes provision is all the difference in the world. When war erupts, a peacekeeping force can only turn and run. A war-preventing force will stand and fight. That makes war less likely to erupt.

That is why UNEF's first commander wanted to head a war-preventing, not a peacekeeping, force in the Middle East. "I thought the force should be so strong that it would be in no danger of being thrust out," General E. L. M. Burns has recorded in his memoirs, Between Arab and Israeli.

"I thought such a force, in view of the strength of the armed forces of Israel and Egypt, would have to be about the size of a division, with a bridge of tanks, and attached reconnaissance and fighter-aircraft units — the whole organized as an operational force capable of fighting . . . What UNEF turned out to be was something much less potent."

Something much more potent is what both Arabs and Israeli need now for their security — a combined Soviet-American war-preventing force in the Middle East, drawn for that duty for the foreseeable future from present deployments in Central Europe which neither side there needs for its security — at least against the other.

Would Arabs and Israelis agree to such interposition in such strength? There are sound reasons why they should — the Arabs to save their faces, the Israelis to save their lives.

Would the Americans and Russians agree? That may seem more doubtful. But there is no other way for them to make sure that the Fifth Middle Eastern War does not become the Third World War.

The U.S. secretary of State should try to convince the Russians that they with the Americans should form a war-preventing force — for the Middle East — and fast. Then, and only then, will Henry Kissinger have truly earned his half of the Nobel Prize for peace.

$10 Million For What?

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA — One hesitates to be too censorious of the government's multiculturalism program. For one thing, Canadians who are of neither French nor Anglo-Saxon ancestry have been overlooked by successive governments and are probably entitled to a little consideration. For another, the program does not hurt anyone and has the potential at least of being of marginal assistance to some. Finally, the program tends to be judged, not on its own merits or demerits but always in the context of the government's motives in starting it and the methods used by the responsible cabinet officer, Minister of State for Multiculturalism Stanley Haidasz, in promoting it (and himself).

Even after two years, the suspicion remains that the government embarked on the program primarily because it concluded that there were votes to be gained by the judicious dispensation of a few federal funds — $10-million this fiscal year — in grants to ethnic organizations. Nothing that Dr. Haidasz, a politician of considerable pomposity, has done or said in his 11 months as a cabinet minister has in any way allayed that suspicion.

He has been guilty of grossly over-selling what is, in reality, a very minor federal program. Reading his speeches, one is left with the impression that Dr. Haidasz has convinced himself that October 8, 1971 ("that historic occasion", when Pierre Trudeau announced the multiculturalism policy), ranks in human history at least on a par with June 15, 1215 (the signing of Magna Carta by King John).

A Showcase

All of which brings us to the First Canadian Conference on Multiculturalism which was held in Ottawa recently. It seemed at the outset as though the conference attended by representatives of 49 ethnic groups—was to be little more than a showcase for Stanley Haidasz. As the 400-plus delegates arrived, they were handed kits which included one three-page biography of Dr. Haidasz, two texts of earlier speeches by Dr. Haidasz and five press releases from Dr. Haidasz. Plus one application form for a multiculturalism grant. Then there was the speech of welcome in which the minister described his multiculturalism program as "a keystone of national unity".

Following the opening session, however, the delegates were left alone to meet in six workshops and discuss such subjects as the arts, youth, inequality and immigration. The restrained discussions showed that multiculturalism has spawned a lingo all its own: "ethno-cultural organizations", "sensitization", "multiform cultural inheritance", "ethno-musicological studies", and "de-emphasis of ethnic belongingness" due to the "rejection of ethnicity by the young" as a result of "denigration of ethnicity" in school textbooks.

The discussions did not, however, establish that there was any particular need for the government to have called the conference or, for that matter, for it to invest $10-million in grants to ethnic organizations.

The resolutions that emerged from the workshops betrayed no sense of alienation or deep concern about the place of minority groups in Canadian society. The delegates thought that it would be a good idea to have a full department of multiculturalism, that the CBC should devote one-sixth of its production budget to multicultural programming and that a National Ethnic Museum should be established.

HAIDASZ
. . . pomposity

But there were no cries about discrimination in housing, no plans for government relief for sorely impoverished immigrants in Toronto or Montreal, no demands for a better deal for Canada's native peoples (who, government officials kept insisting, have a place under the multiculturalism umbrella).

There was no doubt that the delegates were representative of the people who are benefiting from multiculturalism grants. And perhaps that's what is wrong with the program.

Lack of Concern

The delegates were a contented lot, middle-class and middle-aged. As representatives of the Ethnic Establishment, their concern with immigration problems was markedly slight. One workshop even voted down a resolution asking the government to extend the amnesty period for illegal immigrants so that those still in hiding could have a second chance to become Canadians.

That decision, plus the fact that only 10 per cent of new immigrants bother to join ethnic organizations in Canada, should cause the government to wonder about the relevance of its grants program.

Boiling Down the Swill in Joey's Self-Puffery

By HARRY BRUCE

A train is drifting south towards Shanghai and, among those aboard, there's a little white man with a noticeably un-Chinese nose and gleaming spectacles, and, as the train pulls to a halt at Hangchow, he sees a Chinese band on the platform.

It's playing a rousing farewell to a bunch of Albanians, and one of the instruments is a huge drum on a tripod. The sticks are like Indian clubs. The man on the train turns to his interpreter and says, "You know, I've never seen a drum like that before," and the interpreter says, "Would you like to play that drum, Mr. Smallwood?"

"You bet I would," says Smallwood. He hops off the train and grabs the drumsticks. The Albanians stand around grinning. The Chinese stand around grinning. And there's little Joe Smallwood, out there on a railroad platform the rest of us will never see, out there among men from two countries that are still the greatest national mysteries to the whole western world, standing out there in a place that is as different from Newfoundland as birdsnest soup, cloud's ears and hundred-year-old eggs are different from seal-flipper pie, and he's swinging the biggest drumsticks he's ever seen, and he's beating the bejesus out of that oriental drum, and his elbows are flying. Poom, bang, poom.

After a while, he and the Albanians get aboard the Chinese train and they all roll down to Shanghai together — Joey Smallwood, former premier of Newfoundland, fellow-travelling in his declining years — and months later, Joey is back home in Newfoundland and he says, yes, he aches to see the great archeological sites of Iraq, the Indus Valley and South America, and he's going to travel six great rivers of the world and write a big book about them, and he'd like to see Samarkand and Tashkent and, oh yes, he'd sure like to visit Albania, too.

"I've always felt," he says, "that it's better to wear out than to rust out."

But why Albania, Mr. Smallwood?

The answer is as plain as the nose on his face. He wants to go to Albania because hardly anybody from the non-Communist world ever gets in there. He wants to go to Albania because historical mysteries fascinate him but also because getting there would be another first for Joe Smallwood.

If the Albanians at Hangchow assumed for one moment that Joey was beating that funny drum just for them, they were wrong. Both Joey's new book, I Chose Canada, and an appropriately one-sided five-hour conversation I had with him recently tell me that when Joey beats any drum, the drum tolls almost entirely for himself.

The difference is that his drum-beating in print is a bore — his drum-beating with the spoken word retains all of its famous old charm. I hoped he would never stop talking but, reading his book, I wondered how in God's name any man could possibly indulge his own vanity at such excruciating length.

"I was perhaps the first hog-raiser in Newfoundland," Joey tells us, "to put in a system for boiling all swill." What the book needs is a system for boiling down all swill. It's quite possibly the most egocentric book since the autobiography of Kwame Nkrumah (1957). It's a stupefying mixture of self-justification, self-appreciation, admiring self-analysis, other people's favorable opinions of Joey, and chunks of old Joey speeches. At times, he seems genuinely amazed by his own excellence.

Moreover, the book raises name-dropping to new heights of blatancy. My favorite example is this: "So among my souvenirs is remembrance of the time I discussed the relative values of horse, cow, sheep, pig and poultry manures with the son of the man who taught Winston Churchill his English."

Finally, Joey apparently decides he's failed to give proper credit to all the famous people who were fortunate enough to meet him at one time or another, so he tacks on an appendix to the book. It's a list of 75 big names.

There's another odd appendix and it, too, is a list of names. There's more than 200 of them, and their distinction is that they were all forebears of Joey who lived into their 80s, 90s and even 100s.

In the book, and in conversation, Joey stresses not only the amazing longevity of his ancestors, but also the amazing state of his own health. It's doubtful if any other politician in the country's history has ever openly demonstrated so profound an interest in his chances of living a long time.

At home in Newfoundland, Joey, now 73 years old, briskly paced his cavernous living-room and announced what he would do with the time he has coming to him.

He'll roll around the world on a perpetual voyage of discovery. He's already read 20,000 books, and he'll read thousands more. He'll write a book a year for the rest of his life. He'll write a masterpiece, a great and definitive history of Newfoundland and — though political achievements fade in everyone's memory — that book, he is sure, will live long after everything else he has done for Newfoundland is no more than an historical footnote.

For if Joey cares about his mortality, he cares, too, about his immortal fame. The trouble is, there's a terrible flaw in his plan and, as you watch him talk — with all his fantastic mangnetism and a charm that comes to him as naturally as icebergs move south in the spring — the flaw seems very sad. You want Joey to win.

The flaw lies in the nature of his confidence. He tells us in his book that he has "an unqualified, unwavering, unquestioned confidence in myself, my potential, and my destiny, at all times and seasons. Whether I should be rich or poor, high or low, pragmatically successful or a failure . . . I have noticed throughout my life that I have never even momentarily lost faith in myself . . ."

It was exactly that confidence that inspired him to think he would write a 300,000-word book in five months. He dictated it to secretaries, with all the blind and supreme confidence of a man who can't remember ever having made a lousy speech in his life.

Writing books that guarantee your immortality, however, requires painful respect for the craft of writing. Great writers do occasionally lose faith in themselves. They learn a kind of humility that Joey has never known.

The greatest since Nkrumah?

A Fondness for Pandas

By HENRY MORGAN

Mr. Trudeau is a well-brought-up gentleman, one has been led to believe. And yet — does a well-brought-up gentleman tell his host what he would like to receive as a gift?

The prime minister let it be known that he wanted the Chinese to give him a panda. Oh, not directly, to be sure . . . he didn't just send a postcard reading: "I'll be in your town Thursday. I am bringing some beavers. I want a panda. Yrs., T."

It was all done on the highest levels of diplomacy. The Canadian ambassador probably took his Chinese opposite number to tea. They sat around for a while discussing unimportant things and then, in the oldest traditions of diplomatic exchange, the Canadian arrived at the exact, the precise moment.

"I say," he probably said, "I say . . . you've possibly been made aware that my . . . er . . . head of state is arriving shortly?"

"Oh, yes . . . there's been some talk . . ."

"Quite. Very fine man, our Mr. Trudeau. Varied interests, you know."

"Indeed?"

"Oh my, yes. Loves animals, in fact. Not just dogs and cats either, mind you, his interests are much broader than that!"

"Ah, so?"

"Indeedy deedy! As a matter of fact . . . and this may surprise you . . . I've often heard him declare a particular fondness for (looks quickly around to see that they aren't overhead) . . . pandas!"

"Ah. And has he many?"

"Interestingly enough, no, Isn't that odd? Here's a man who is positively dotty about 'em, too. Adores 'em. You can have your parakeets, your goldfish, your gerbils and whatever — they're not for him. No sir, as far as the chief is concerned, give him a panda every time."

"And do they?"

"Beg pardon? Do who what?"

"Do they give him a panda every time?"

"Just a figure of speech, old boy. Figure of speech. In point of fact, pandas are hard to come by. Deuced hard. Except in China, of course."

"Ah."

"Quite so."

"And I gather that Mr. Trudeau would want to give a gift in return for this possible panda, of which he is so fond?"

"Most assuredly!"

"A few thousand tons of wheat perhaps?"

"Er, frankly speaking, no."

"Then what does he have in mind as a fair exchange?"

"Well, when one gets right down to it. Beavers. Four beavers."

"Canada has many, many beavers, has it not?"

"I believe so, yes."

"China has very few pandas."

"But you gave Mr. Nixon two! Two whole ones!"

"Ah, that Mr. Nixon! It's true that we gave him two, but he has four homes. Mr. Trudeau has but the one home, is that not so?"

"We're just a small country, really . . ."

"Then take my advice, sir. What's fair is fair. We are prepared to offer Mr. Trudeau a brand new pen and pencil set. Here's my hand on it."

"You're all heart, sir."

MEYER'S MILLION SENT TO ISRAEL

TEL AVIV — Meyer Lansky, the American Jew who is reputed to be the financial wizard of organized crime in the United States and who was expelled from Israel last year, has donated a million dollars to that country, the Israeli press reported today.

Lansky, who was arrested when he returned to the United States on charges connected with his underworld reputation, made the donation during a fund-raising tour of the United States by Israeli Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir.

He has given Israel money before, during the war of independence, during the Sinai campaign and in 1967.

SAN FRANCISCO — Clyde Fannon of Firebaugh, Calif., reported to police that two women he invited to his hotel room for a drink stole his wallet, credit cards and $30 when he fell asleep. Fannon is a police commissioner in town for a convention.

MEMPHIS — Singer Elvis Presley, recuperating from recurrent pneumonia in a Memphis hospital, is becoming "restless and bored," his father says.

"He is ready to get out of the hospital as soon as the doctors give him the release," Vernon Presley said Tuesday. "His lungs are clear and he is gaining back his strength."

SANTA MONICA — Actor James Stacy has filed a suit seeking $20 million in damages for a traffic accident in which he lost his left arm and left leg. Stacy's female companion was killed Sept. 28 when an auto collided with Stacy's motorcycle.

TEL AVIV — The Israeli soldier's disregard for rank is legendary, but a jeep driver in the Sinai must hold a new record for gall in the face of a general.

The driver pulled up his jeep at an outpost in the Sinai and stopped to let Maj. Gen. Ezer Weizman out to speak to another officer. After a while, however, the impatient driver got tired of waiting for the general to return.

"Come on, already, Weizman, will you," the young man finally shouted out. The general turned to the driver, walked back to the jeep and got in without a word of reprimand.

Wanted: 100 Sexy Men

HARLEPOOL, England (Reuter) — One hundred Chinese girls, fed up with cold, inscrutable men at home, have placed a bulk order for 100 "strong and sexy" British bridegrooms.

The girls, all Hong Kong factory workers between 17 and 23, sent their order to a "lonely hearts club" in this northern town.

Eighteen-year-old ANNA Ling wrote: "British men are full of sport and fun. Please find 100 with broad shoulders, strong and sexy . . . we are Chinese girls who are tired of cold men. They are not very nice."

The club's director, Evelyn Harrison, 48, said she would try to find 100 men to fit the bill.

"It is very flattering to the British man and I am told Chinese girls make excellent wives," she said.

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Calvin Sandau is asking in a divorce action for $250 a week allowance and $5,000 in lawyer's fees from his wife Nellie. But he says that isn't asking too much because his wife's brothel is doing a booming business.

An accounting of Mrs. Sandau's Kit Kat guest ranch near here, supplied to the court by Mrs. Sandau's lawyers, showed a net profit for 1972 of $31,406.

Women Cleared To Work Underground

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Women will again be allowed to work underground in British Columbia mines under legislation introduced in the house Tuesday.

Since 1911 women have been prohibited from working in mines by protective clauses Mines Regulations Act.

Extensive amendments to that act, introduced by Mines Minister Leo Nimsick in a 21-page bill, will allow a female to be employed underground with the permission of the chief inspector of mines.

As the act read previously, the chief inspector could approve the employment of a woman but strictly in conformity with the Convention of the International Labor Organization which stated that only female nurses, engineers or geologists could be permitted to work in a mine.

That stipulation is removed in the new legislation and chief inspector Bill Peck says he will let women into the mines.

The restriction against women working on the surface was lifted previously, Peck said, and some women have already been driving trucks in surface operations.

The long list of amendments to the Mines Act constitute the first major revision of the 76-year-old act.

They include an important section requiring companies engaged in mining exploration to obtain reclamation permits in the same manner as those involved in actual mining must already do under the act.

The main body of the amendments, however, deal with safety conditions in mines.

Among the provisions:

—Local safety committees in each mine will receive copies of all inspection reports and be allowed to participate in and receive information from any specal investigations or inquests held following an incident or accident.

—Union safety representative will accompany the government inspector when he tours a mine.

—Workmen will not be disciplined for refusing to work in a part of the mine he can prove is an "unusual hazard."

—All people working in a mine must hold a new miners' certificate to give miners a dignity and "status in society" which is accorded other tradesmen such as plumbers or machinists.

—Noise tests will be compulsory in mines and miners will have the right to demand air quality tests in their work locations. Rules concerning the availability of respiratory equipment and the underground use of diesel equipment have also been tightened.

—Nimsick said the new regulations and amendements are the result of several months of close consultation with mine management and labor.

'Canadian Only' Bid Fails

A bid to force Canadian-only trade union representation on the new Labor Relations Board failed in the legislature Tuesday during the sesssion's second night sitting.

The motion to require that one member of the 10-man board be a representative of Canadian unions was among seven opposition amendments to the Labor Code of B.C. Act turned down during the evening.

Over 70 more amendments have still to be discussed during committee-stage reading of the labor code bill. The act contains 153 sections and only 22 have been approved.

Several opposition members spoke in favor of requiring a Canadian union representative on the board during a debate which was fiery and laced with personal invectives across the floor.

In supporting the motion, put forward by Liberal leader David Anderson, Jim Chabot (SC — Columbia River) said there is growing fear that recognition will not be given the growing Canadian trade union movement.

There is a suspicion, he siad, that there is a "close relationship" between the government and the international trade union movement.

Ed Smith (SC — North Peace River) said the government should accept the amendment in recognition that the Canadian union movement "is part of B.C.'s way of life."

Labor Minister Bill King said appointments to the board will be made on the basis of merit, not on union affiliation.

As the debate grew more heated, Garde Gardom (L — Vancouver-Point Grey) accused the minister of "demeaning" the house, the public and himself in lowering the level of discussion to a "vitriolic tirade" against the opposition.

King replied that his remarks throughout third reading of the bill had been in response to "scandalous and scurrilous innuendo" from the other side of the house.

The amendment was defeated 32 to 13 with all opposition parties supporting the motion to amend.

Two amendments attempting to bring the power of the courts into play in the labor code were defeated after extensive debate.

Both amendments would allow the Labor Relations Board, its chairman or a panel of the board to seek the opinion of the Supreme Court on any question of law respecting interpretation of the act.

Allan William (L — West Vancouver-Point Grey) proposed the board could accept the opinion and then make its own ruling on the point, while Scott Wallace (PC — Oak Bay) moved the board be bound by the decision of the court.

King argued that a major purpose of the legislation was to get away from involvng courts in labor-management disputes and, instead, have a qualified board deal with the problems.

The board, he said, would build up a body of administrative law of its own.

Williams' amendment would not work, he said because if the Supreme Court made a ruling the board would be obliged to respect it.

On another amendment, King said he agreed that persons making submissions to the board should have the right to legal counsel but he refused to accept the four-word amendment which would spell out that right.

As minister, he said, he would insure that right was respected.

Opposition members argued it was a simple change in one section of the bill which would lay down the right permanently and not be subject to the changing political fortunes of labor ministers.

$4M Loss On Transit Services

B.C. Hydro lost more than $4 million during the last fiscal year in providing bus service to Victoria and Vancouver.

Figures released Tuesday reveal the crown corporation lost $5,092,691 in Vancouver and $916,226 in Victoria for a total of $6,008,917 with $2 million of those losses made up by an annual provincial government subsidy.

The figures were made public by Premier Barrett in response to a question by Saanich MLA Hugh Curtis.

In Victoria, Hydro had revenues for the fiscal year ending in March, 1973, of $1,863,890. Expenditures for the same year totalled $2,280,116.

Land Interest Dropping

Only 35 persons turned up for a public information meeting on the agricultural land reserve plan Tuesday night and few of them had questions for Capital Regional District directors.

The meeting was the fourth in a series to explain the plan, a requirement of all regional districts in B.C. under the Land Commission Act. The last meeting will be Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the district's office at 524 Yates.

The formal public hearing will start Monday at 9 a.m. in the district's boardroom and continue until everyone has been heard. After that, the plan will be forwarded to the land commission which will make the final decision on what land must be reserved for farming purposes only.

Earlier public information meetings have drawn 50 to 70 people except last Friday's on the Saanich Peninsula when 250 showed up.

Some residents asked questions Tuesday night about specific pieces of property, wanting to know if their land was inluded or excluded from the reserve.

A short slide presentation and tape-recorded comments from land commission chairman W. T. Lane were given the meeting. Lane said there is a need to preserve farmland because more than 10,000 acres of it each year have been lost to urban development.

SOAPBOX CHEAT FINED

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — A juvenile judge Tuesday fined Robert Lange $2,000 and told him to apologize to America's youth for helping his nephew cheat to win the 1973 National Soapbox Derby at Akron, Ohio.

"I am stunned by the lack of morality in the case," Judge Horace Holmes told Lange, a Denver businessman. He said Lange "Owes a tremendous apology to the young people in this country."

Holmes ordered Lange to pay $2,000 to the Boulder Boys Club for helping his nephew, James Gronen, 14, install an electromagnet device in his green racer that helped him win the soapbox derby.

Lange had been charged with two counts of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. Holmes deferred sentencing on the charges for two years and ordered Lange, whose son won the 1972 derby, to stay out of Derby operations until 1975.

French Oasis Planted

Efforts to establish a French-language oasis in English-speaking Victoria are expected to crystallize at a meeting tonight in St. Jean Baptiste parish hall, 301 Richmond.

The 8 p.m. meeting has been called to form a society to establish a French-language centre in Victoria.

Those attending will be asked to ratify a new constitution for Le Centre Socio-Culturel Francais de Victoria, the name the society hopes to register.

Aim of the society is to find and rent a house to become a full-time centre for French-language activities of all kinds, said Andre Godbout, acting secretary.

Tonight's meeting is the third.

At the last meeting, in September, more than 80 people showed up, all eager to take part, she said.

Committees have been formed to organize artistic and cultural activities, set up a discotheque, prepare the constitution and to organize outdoor activities.

The group is a unique example of co-operation between French and English Canadians trying to learn or perfect their French, she said.

The centre, she said, will be for people who want a chance to use their mother tongue and for people who, having studied French, find there is nowhere in Victoria to speak it.

Once the constitution is ratified the society will start selling memberships, and renewing its appeals to municipalities and school boards for financial backing, said Godbout.

Also, they were "pretty well assured" they could get a grant from the federal secretary of state's department if they could show they had support at the local level, he said.

Soldiers Attacking Mosquitoes

TEL AVIV (UPI) — The Israeli army is releasing several of its reserve soldiers from active duty so they can fight a mosquito invasion on the home front.

A Tel Aviv government spokesman said the reservists, municipal insect control experts in civilian life, will spray streams near the city to prevent the mosquito invasion from becoming a major onslaught.

Municipal emergency headquarters, meanwhile, said it had managed to recruit eight plumbers to relieve the shortage of handymen caused by the callup of reservists for the Middle East War.

They're Investing Millions on This Tiny Clearing

By GLADWIN HILL

SANS SAULT, Northwest Territories (NYT) — Before spending $5 billion on a technically unprecedented engineering project it is considered good form to find out if it is going to work.

That is why $4.5 million has been invested in a tiny clearing in the wilderness, only half a mile square, here in the Mackenzie River Valley 250 miles south of Arctic Ocean.

The facility, 100 miles from the nearest sizable settlement, consists principally of a small cluster of plywood and sheet metal buildings, some fuel tanks, and two 1,000-foot loops of pipe, four feet in diameter, partly above ground and partly buried.

Experiments conducted here over the last two years have no military implications. Hinging on them, rather, is the question of whether millions of households in the United states, and in Canada, can be supplied with natural gas in the years ahead or whether, conceivably, currently growing gas shortages might force a shift to some other fuel.

Six hundred miles northwest of here, in the newly discovered oil fields at Prudhoe Bay, Alaska, are upward of 26,000 billion cubic feet of gas — about 8 per cent of North America's proved reserves.

A consortium of 26 United States and Canadian companies has a plan to pipe this gas some 1,500 miles down the Mackenzie River Valley to southern Canada, to link distribution systems in the western parts of the two countries.

It is possibly the biggest engineering project in history, far exceeding in length and cost the planned 789-mile pipeline to move Prudhoe oil westward to an ice-free Alaska port.

The earth along both pipeline routes is perpetually frozen and is commonly called "permafrost."

The oil pipeline has to run largely above ground with the oil heated so it will not freeze. The gas pipeline presents just the opposite problem. For a combination of environmental and maintenance reasons, an above-ground gas line was rejected in favor of the idea of burying the pipe in a trench several feet deep.

Gas will not freeze at natural temperatures. But if fed through the pipeline above freezing, it would thaw the permafrost and leave the pipeline "floating" precariously in a slough of mud.

A solution seemed to be to keep the gas chilled to freezing. Two years of research and experimentation have been devoted to proving out the feasibility of this type of transmission.

The twin test loops of pipe that are the most conspicuous features of the facility run through several types of soil at different levels.

From hundreds of electric sensors and visual gauges attached to the pipe millions of temperature and stress readings have been compiled.

The Sans Sault facility is one of three field research stations established for the project. About $7 million has been spent on them to date. The other facilities are at Prudhoe Bay and Norman Wells.

Along with the engineering work there has been an elaborate program of environmental impact studies covering major portions of the pipeline route, on which more than $4 million has been spent. It involves 17 biologists and research assistants in 1971, and a force of 55 in 1972.

The route traverses the habitation of hundreds of thousands of caribou. Observations to date indicate the buried pipeline will not bother them or the numerous other species in the area, which include moose, Dall sheep, bear, wolves, foxes and muskrat.

Noninterference with animal life is considered important not only from the standpoint of academic ecology but also for the sake of thousands of natives whose whole way of life is geared to hunting.

More of a problem than the long-term operation of the pipeline is the potential disruptions during the construction phase. Roads and all other facilities have to be built on gravel pads, to insulate the permafrost from them. Gravel has to come mainly from streambeds. Studies are being conducted to avoid conflicts with fish life.

To date, the sponsors' assessment is that environmental disruptions can be kept minimal.

Nutrition Study Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia School Trustees Association has set up a committee to study the nutrition of young people, the food they eat and the responsibility of schools regarding nutrition. Committee members are Dr. Katherine Mirhady of Vancouver, Hedi Lattery of Vernon and Isabelle Reader of Sooke. The report is to be presented to the annual BCSTA convention in May.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A hunter who shot a deer out of season with an illegal cartridge was fined a total of $300 when he pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Tuesday to two violations of the Wildlife Act and one under the Firearms Act.

Stephen Druskie, 56, of 305 Walton Place, was charged after two conservation officers found him near Jordan Meadows in the Sooke area with a doe deer he admitted shooting the evening before.

He was charged with shooting game during closed season and using a rim fired cartridge which is illegal when hunting big game.

In addition conservation officers found a loaded .22 calibre rifle in Druskie's truck, a violation of the Firearms Act.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said there had been four reports so far this year of doe being shot out of season and requested the court "take a serious view of this matter."

He asked Judge William Ostler to recommend to the government that Druskie's hunting licence be cancelled. Ostler agreed.

Druskie told Ostler he had shot the doe by mistake thinking it was a buck for which the hunting season was open.

But Druskie instead of reporting the mistake, had cleaned the deer and butchered it.

"It makes a mockery of the sport of hunting," Ostler said. "It's slaughtering ... not hunting."

He levied $105 fines on each charge.

A total of $250 in fines was handed a 19-year-old John Alexander MacAulay, 5191 Santa Clara, when he appeared before Judge Edmond St. Jorre for sentencing for possession of a restricted drug, LSD, and a narcotic, cocaine.

MacAulay pleaded guilty Oct. 9.

Two character witnesses pointed out MacAulay was a long standing member of a 4-H group and was an aspiring farmer.

St. Jorre noted the youth claimed he took the drugs "out of curiosity" and had been using chemicals for six weeks, marijuana for about a year.

He fined the accused $100 on the LSD charge, $150 on the cocaine, and placed him on six months probation with the stipulation he stay away from drugs ... and drug users during that time.

Donald Peter Keeler, 23, of Edmonton, received a suspended sentence and was placed on one year's probation for theft of a car — a crime described by St. Jorre as "more foolish than criminal."

Keeler pleaded guilty Sept. 26. He was charged after failing to return a rented car he had taken in Edmonton and which he had driven with his wife and three children on a job hunting foray to B.C.

As a condition to the probation order St. Jorre prohibited Keeler from incurring debts by borrowing money or buying on the instalment plan without first getting the permission of the probation officer.

"If the accused can control his debts and bring them under control he will have won half the battle," the judge said.

Michael James Peters, 19, of 634 Pine was fined $75 after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana. Police searched the youth early Tuesday morning in the 400 block Bay and found a joint of marijuana in his jacket pocket.

Ostler fined her $50 and placed her on six months probation.

For discharging a .22 calibre Luger-type pistol in Beacon Hill Park, a 23-year-old Victoria man was fined $75 when he appeared before Ostler.

Police said they were called to the Superior Street side of the park Sept. 17 after complaints of gunshots in the area. They found Kenneth Charles Moran, 1392 Rockland, sitting in a car with another man.

Both men admitted firing the postol. police said. The other man appeared in court shortly after the incident, pleaded guilty and was fined $75.

Edward Randel Jeffrey Johnson, 22, of 1024 McClure, was fined $250 and prohibited from driving six months when he was found guilty by Judge Harold Alder of impaired driving June 5 on Douglas.

Delta Eskimos Appeal

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — About 124 Canadian-resident Eskimos could be eligible for some of the $1 billion land settlement between the United States government and Alaskan natives, says a spokesman for the Committee for Original People's Entitlement (COPE).

He said representatives of a native group in Alaska were coming to Inuvik, in the Mackenzie Delta region, this week to help with the procedure of appealing to U.S. authorities on behalf of the 124 Eskimos.

The 124 were among 918 Canadian - resident Eskimos who were originally thought to be eligible because one or more of their parents were born in Alaska.

The 918 names were researched by the Alaska Federation of Natives last fall. COPE, a federally-funded organization, helped Canadian Eskimos fill out the complicated forms required by the Alaskan group.

Late in the summer COPE was informed that all 918 applications had been rejected and there was a 30-day period in which to file an appeal.

By the time the Sept. 23 deadline had passed COPE workers had been able to process the 124 Eskimos they thought had the best chance to win appeals.

The people involved in the settlement come from the Mackenzie Delta areas of Tuktoyaktuk, Aklavik and Inuvik as well as the central Arctic settlement of Gjoa Haven and the western Arctic community of Coppermine.

In order to claim part of the settlement the Eskimos must prove they are U.S. citizens. But many never received birth certificates or baptismal papers.

Native workers in Alaska are still searching old churches and other buildings in attempts to find proof of birth for some of the Canadian residents.

The Canadian-resident Eskimos must also prove they are at least one-quarter Alaskan native.

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — A Japanese and an American working for U.S. copropations Tuesday shared the 1973 Nobel Prize for physics with a Briton for their theories advancing the world of miniture electronics.

A German and an Englishman shared the chemistry prize for work that could help solve automobile exhaust pollution.

Mice Suffer With Vicks

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Globe said today a team of Harvard researchers has found the widely used Vicks Vaporub suppresses "the natural immune defense of mice, making them more susceptible to bacterial pneumonia."

The Globe said the results of the study, conducted during the past two years in the infectious diseases division of Harvard's Channing Laboratory, will be detailed today at a meeting of the American College of Chest Physicians in Toronto.

Richardson-Merrell Inc. the manufacturer of Vaporub, told the Globe that in 68 years of experience with the product "there has never been any indication that the phenomnenon observed in mice . . . in fact occurs in man."

Dr. Gary Huber, head of Channing Lab, said "one cannot ever totally extropolate" results of experiments with mice to prudict what will happen to a human subject.

The Harvard team, the Globe said, found a "very significant depression in the ability of the lung to kill bacteria when Vaporub was applied to the mice's chests or introduced into their air supply by a steam vaporizer.

The Globe said "the only clue to a possible culprit comes from studies which have shown that children who swallow significant amounts of turpentine often contact cases of pneumonia that are very resistant to antibiotics." The Globe said turpentine is one of the ingredients of Vaporub.

Pickets Demand Vitamins Freed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "A and D for you and me. Let me be free with vitamin C," shouted the pickets.

For a half hour Tuesday they marched and chanted in front of Food and Drug Administration offices near Capitol Hill, then were invited inside for a talk with Dr. Ogden Johnson, acting director of the office of nutrition and consumer science.

Their cause? To persuade the government to scrap regulations which, as of Jan. 1, 1975, would ban vitamins in combination with other substances having "no scientifically recognized value" and which would also classify as drugs any food, vitamin or food supplement containing more than three times the recommended daily allowance of any one vitamin. This would mean prescriptions could be required for heavy vitamin doses.

Jerry Kessler of Plainview, N.Y., who manufactures health food supplies, said 80 per cent of his products would be outlawed, and he would have to go out of business under the new regulations.

Johnson told the group it was not the FDA's intention to put the health food industry out of business. He doubted that very many vitamins would wind up on a prescription basis although some will, because of health claims being made for them.

Washington lawyer John Matonis handed Johnson an apple which he said was labled in such a way that it would be outlawed under the new regulations because it naturally contains vitamin C and biaflavonoids, a combination which the FDA says has no proven benefit beyond the vitamin C.

Matonis said health food groups across the country hope to get stickers carrying this message placed on apples in stores.

Item: The ink barely dry on my Monday notes about the chances for early retirement under the Mincome program when I had an irate call from a cultured-voice gentleman accusing me of abetting "the socialist credo of something for nothing."

I found it hard to rationalize this man's righteous indignation — a rage, really — that some couples at 60 are actually contemplating an adjustment in their lives to take government money (close to $100 a week for a couple past the 60-mark) five years ahead of the accepted retirement age.

I suppose there's something admirable in a pride or independence that would cause a man to reject this, but it's also dreadfully old-fashioned as well.

In a time when governments at every level have a restraining and guiding hand in each individual's life it seems to me the average man may accept a public purse benefit as a right, just as he accepts his contribution to it as a necessity.

When you think of the extent of that contribution over the working years of a 60-year-old breadwinner and his spouse in taxes, alone, not forgetting the ubiquitous sales tax, it seems only an elementary justice they should get something in the way of a refund when the economy will bear it, as the British Columbia economy jolly well will.

Since my caller wouldn't give me either his name or the extent of his income my hunch is that his resentment comes from a class feeling that's happily eroding.

Item: To reading this night Pierre Berton's new book Drifting Home, his account of 11 days spent rafting down the Yukon River to Dawson City, though it covers a span of three generations, and I believe it to be his most readable, memorable story.

As a friend who has always envied his sense of the past, of his own place in the passage of time and history, I found the most engrossing passages devoted to his own explanation of this peculiar talent.

Pierre writes of a particular moment when some of the party (four guides, Pierre and Janet, their seven children, a nephew and the boyfriend of one of the daughters) were asleep in the drifting rubber rafts after a sing-song and a mid-afternoon snack.

"Looking on this tranquil scene it occurs to me that this is probably the enduring vision that will return to warm me in later years," Pierre recalls. "It is very difficult to relish such moments except in retrospect. Generally, when they occur, one does not hink of them as particularly significant."

He recalls a view expressed by Somerset Maugham who confessed once that he'd enjoyed many hours of romance in various parts of the world without realizing, when they were romantic moments.

"Ever since reading those lines I have tried to see every day in terms of both the past and the future," Pierre writes. "One of the devices I use is to pretend, at any given instant, that I am an old man at the close of life thinking back to the days when I was in my prime and longing to relive them.

"Whenever I play this game the sky at once seems bluer and the grass greener. I am playing it now, lying back in the boat and looking over my family in the guise of an old man who has been given a brief repreive to re-experience a moment from the past."

The secret is as simple as that, it seems, and though I'm a little late I mean to make it my own.

Item: A chance meeting today at Ladysmith with W. J. "Red" Williams, famed as a water well-driller in his neck of the woods and throughout the Gulf Islands, and I found him curiously negative about the magical powers of the "dowser" or "diviner."

"Red" takes the view that there's no harm done if a client wants the services of one of those willow-branch-toting characters who claim to be able to locate underground streams, but in his years of drilling he's become convinced that there's less to it than meets the eye.

City people may greet the opinion with a yawn, but I know of no more controversial subject in the wide open spaces away from the water mains.

You do or you don't believe in the witch-craft of "dowsing." Those who don't will always tell you — rightly — that you can never prove a diviner to be wrong, because if you drill deep enough anywhere you'll hit water. But, as a believer, a man who has seen the willow wrenched from the iron grip of a diviner, I count it among my strongest prejudices.

Five More Cases

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer said today throat swabs have uncovered five children carrying diptheria bacteria.

But Dr. John Whitbread said it's not possible to anticipate whether the community is in for another winter outbreak. There were 47 cases from mid-March to the end of July this year.

All five of the current cases are or have been treated in hospital isolation units where antibiotics quickly clear up patients who are just carriers.

None of the five displayed diptheria symptoms but were being treated for other conditions, he said. The diphtheria was discovered through routine throat swabs.

Three of the five children had been fully immunized. One of the youngsters was from Port Alberni.

Diphtheria, an acute infection generally centred in tonsils, larynx or nose, can generate a virulent toxin and was a particular threat to children during epidemics half a century ago. Mortality ran five to 10 per cent of cases.

The disease had all but disappeared following widespread immunization programs in recent decades but is recurring now, frequently as an infection carried by people who are unaffected by it because they have been immunized.

While immunization can protect a so-called carrier, the carrier can still harbor the disease and pass it to others.

Pre-school children can be immunized at well-baby clinics operated throughout Greater Victoria and school children receive booster immunization in Grades 1, 5 and 10 where parents grant permission. An estimated 80 per cent of children are immunized.

Arson In School Suspected

Arson is suspected in two small fires that broke out in Colquitz junior secondary school Tuesday night, a Saanich fire department spokesman said today.

Firemen were called to the school at 6:30 p.m. when smoke was discovered coming out of the girl's occupational cooking classroom.

Fire had damaged a cupboard countertop and spread up the wallboard to the ceiling before it was extinguished, the spokesman said. No damage figures are available.

Two hours later the school's custodian reported a fire had started in the janitor supply room but had gone out on its own.

The spokesman said the fire which destroyed some paper and supplies had apparently been set by a Roman candle fireworks found on a shelf.

Student Pens Promote Wheel Deal

More than 1,000 letters were added Tuesday to a growing five-foot high stack of letters supporting a bicycle trail on southern Vancouver Island.

Radford's plan for the bike trail is to use the CN right-of-way from Victoria to Youbou. The idea is being opposed by the Greater Victoria Water Board which cites danger of polluting the area's water supplies and fire danger to woods within the board's vast land holdings.

Radford told students he wasn't impressed with the board's arguments and hopes to make a decision within two months on the scheme.

Pollen Knocks Radford Action

If Recreation Minister Jack Radford was doing his job properly he would have consulted the Greater Victoria Water Board before "drumming up" public support for a cycling trail between Victoria and Lake Cowichan, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen said the efforts of Radford and his "cohorts" to promote the idea of a trail along the CN right-of-way are precluding the possibility of any objective discussions on the board's concerns over the possible pollution threat to Greater Victoria's water supply.

He was commenting on Radford's statement to a group of Victoria students Tuesday, indicating the minister is strongly in favor of the trail proposal and encouraged by "thousands and thousands and thousands" of letters supporting the scheme.

Pollen repeated his earlier warnings, on a weekend tour of the water district, that the trail's section running alongside Sooke Lake could endanger the purity of the water supply, through a fire-and-erosion process or through fecal contamination.

"This is symptomatic of the sickness in the Canadian political process where we develop a protagonist-antagonist approach . . . charge at each other with swords" before sitting down to a rational discussion of problems, he said.

Pollen said in general he is enthusiastic about the proposed trail, but as water board chairman he also has a responsibility to husband a pristine wilderness area that feeds "one of the most outstanding water systems in North America, if not the world."

Highrise Foe Offered Mace 'Better Image'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Several city aldermen have seen circulated copies of a letter written to developer J. A. Mace by Kenneth Lines, a James Bay resident and public relations consultant, in which Lines offered to undertake an advertising and public relations campaign for the developer.

Among the aims of the campaign, Lines said in the letter to Mace dated Dec. 5, 1972, would be to "cool the antagonism of consumer groups" and to "make the image of the developer a positive one."

Lines is president of the James Bay Community Association, the group which has been in the forefront of efforts to preserve the traditional character of James Bay by opposing plans for highrise development.

Representing the association in two recent public hearings which resulted in the down-zoning of large areas of James Bay, he claimed highrises cause both environmental and sociological damage to a community.

Mace, at the time the letter was written by Lines, was still battling City Hall in his attempts to build the controversial Bay Village highrise at Menzies and Simcoe.

(Thwarted in trying to get the city to excute a land-use contract for the development, Mace subsequently scaled down the concept to conform with normal zoning requirements for the area. He sold the development "package," including the building permit, to Standard Life Assurance last July).

Lines said in an interview Tuesday he does not consider any conflict of interest was involved between his professional approach to Mace and his role as a private citizen owning property and living in James Bay.

An Attempt to Discredit

"For one thing, he said, he was not a member of the association at the time he wrote the letter, and only became a member about a month before he was named president in late July.

Lines said it appeared that Mace or one of his associates was circulating the correspondence in an attempt to "discredit" the association, himself or his wife Kay (a candidate in the Nov. 17 electin for an aldermanic seat on city council).

Mace, however, said it was "curious" that someone willing to provide him with public relations expertise and advice should have identified himself with a group which tends to label developers as "rapacious and irresponsible."

Whether by accident or design, some element of conflict appeared to be involved, he said.

"Presumably if we had taken him up on his offer things would have been easier; he would not be against us. At least people understand clearly where Jim Mace stands," he added.

Mace said he turned down Lines' offer some time last January, and learned several months later that Lines subsequently approached a Vancouver mortgage company executive, who was acting for Standard Life, with a similar offer.

Wide Experience in Promoting

In that letter to Don Graham, of Esteyn Mortgage Company, dated June 28, 1973, Lines referred to the pending acquisition of the Bay Village development, and pointed out he had wide experience in promoting major development projects.

"Perhaps the biggest was Place Bonaventure in Montreal — an $80 million development — Le Cartier, a 30-storey apartment tower and Le Chateau Champlain, the flagship of Canadian Pacific," Lines said in the letter.

"Secondly, I live in James Bay and have had major community involvement, and dialogue with City Hall, in proposed developments in the area.

"As I understand it, your provisional proposals are quite different to those of Jim Mace's. If this is the case, I am sure that presentations and written information on the subject would carry members of the community along with the final concept.

"I am, of course, well versed in the mechanics of community involvement and could work out a program that, I am sure, could be successful."

In his comments to the Times, Lines admitted that section of the letter to Esteyn could look "bad" if read out of contect, but insisted he did not regard his conduct as being in any way unethical.

Explaining the reference to "major community involvement" in the Esteyn letter, Lines said he meant by that the fact that over several months he had helped and advised his wife in her activities on behalf of the association.

He said he had therefore become involved to some extent in the community association's affairs, long before he actually became a member or served on the executive. His wife confirmed the statement, saying initially "Ken was not interested to the degree I was."

Lines said Mace has been battling communities "in an erratic way" ever since he became involved in development in B.C., and he and others like him need "someone to explain to them what they should be doing to be good community-minded citizens."

$181,305 Available

A total of $181,305 in awards and scholarships will be presented to 384 University of Victoria students Friday at the annual Academic Assembly in the UVic gymnasium.

Recognition will go to 278 undergraduate students and 79 graduate students and an additional 27 first-year students who have received a total of $9,650 in entrance awards will be honored.

Some 25 civil servants throughout the province will receive the Diploma in Public Administration, granted after a three-year Executive Development Training Program for civil servants, now in its 18th year.

Newberry May Quit As Alderman

Ald. Alan Newberry of Saanich may have to resign his seat on council early if his plans to spend a year at the University of Indiana go ahead.

Newberry, supervisor of intermediate education for Sooke School District, was granted a year's leave of absence, starting in June, 1974, by Sooke school board Tuesday.

His term on Saanich council ends November, 1974.

He said today he has not decided for sure to resign his seat, but will face the issue when he comes to it.

"It's not sure enough that I'm going (to Indiana) that I'm prepared to resign my seat," he said.

Newberry hopes to complete his doctorate of education.

Alison Pageant Bound

Alison Pennie, the Sidney girl who last May won the title of Miss Victoria, left today to represent the area in the 30-contestant Miss Canada pageant in Toronto.

She will compete for the title won last year by the 1972 Miss Victoria, Gillian Regehr.

Two weeks of activity, including public appearances, parties, interviews, pictures and a Halloween Ball are scheduled during the pageant, leading up to the night of decision Nov. 5, when the pageant will be nationally televised, starting at 7:30 p.m. Victoria time.

Miss Pennie, 19, of 10411 Resthaven, is a Claremont High graduate taking teacher training at University of Victoria and counts sports and singing as her hobbies.

City Girl Wins $2,000 Award

A 16-year-old Victoria girl has been awarded a $2,000 scholarship by Shawnigan Lake's Strathcona Lodge School.

Cindy Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Johnson, 2991 Austin Ave., won the scholarship for further study at the school. She is a grade 11 student.

The award was based on good character, scholastic achievement, athletic ability and leadership potential.

Saanich Adds to Swan Lake

Saanich's municipal planning committee decided in closed session Tuesday to recommend another 21.1 acres of land be bought toward what could eventually be a 91.18 acres ecological teaching area in the Swan Lake-Christmas Hill district.

In a plan that envisions the establishment of nature houses, teaching facilities and hiking trails, the area would provide a nature haven for students, botanists and the general hiking public.

Committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring said Tuesday the project may take as long as 25 years to complete.

Copies of a special report, outlining the program, are being circulated to various organizations that might help in acquiring the land, Waring said.

Ald. Edith Gunning today named some of the organizations that the special report suggested might join Saanich on the project.

"There is no way Saanich can acquire all the land," she said, "although we did buy 54 acres (at a cost of $230,000), as a result of the highly successful 1965 referendum (which approved an expenditure of $100,000).

"The groups that could come in on the program are the provincial department of education's community education program, the provincial department of recreation and conservation, school districts 61 and 63, the University of Victoria, the Capital Regional District, the Capital Improvement District Commission, the Victoria Natural History Society, Ducks Unlimited, the Sierra Club and local service clubs."

She said in addition to helping in acquisition costs, assistance would be needed to meet operating costs.

"There'd have to be at least one caretaker," she said.

Gunning said plans called for the acquisition of 78.88 acres, plus an additional 12.3 acres by "Saanich and others" as an extension.

"It will take the co-operative effort of many interested agencies," she said, "It's a most imaginative plan. The area is so valuable as an educational centre. Young people would become aware of the world around them and the need for conservation."

She added, "Saanich has to take the first steps by acquiring some of the property."

On Oct. 2, 1972, Saanich asked the National Second Century Fund for financial assistance in buying the land. The federal fund has earmarked $4.5 million to be spent on B.C. projects that meet its preservation of conservation requirements.

It is hoped that Nature Conservancy of Canada, a private society, and the Audubon Society, will be among the groups that lend support to the project.

Seniors' Housing Study Under Way

Assessment of housing needs of the elderly in Greater Victoria is under way following a meeting Tuesday at which representatives of 11 local senior citizens housing groups met for the first time.

The purpose of the meeting was "to begin to pool the individual experience of these societies — something we've been meaning to do for a long time," said Mrs. Pauline Baker, executive director of the Silver Threads Services who sponsored the meeting with the Victoria Senior Citizens Housing Society.

The societies agreed to match and review their waiting lists to see where duplications of names occur and determine the real need for additional senior citizens' housing.

SOGGY PUNCH MISSES CITY

The Victoria area escaped severe thunderstorms and 60 m.p.h. winds which lashed up-Island communities overnight as an unstable cold frontal system moved over the Island.

Worst hit was Tofino where .63 inches of rain was reported to have fallen in a half-hour and wind force neared 60 m.p.h.

The tail end of the frontal system is expected to move through the area later this evening and cloudy and rainy conditions with heavy southeasterly winds are predicted by the weather office.

Rainfall in Victoria is listed at .25 inches overnight bringing the monthly total to 1.98 inches, compared to the average of 2.14 inches for October.

Total rainfall reported overnight in other up-Island communities are: Tofino, 1.61 inches; Spring Island, 1.06 inches and Estevan Point .80 inches.

Football: A Buyer Wields a Big Club

They put the football in the air at Vancouver at the weekend, and it hasn't come down yet. Industrialist Jim Pattison made a pitch to buy the B.C. Lions, while at the same time letting it be known he had first refusal on a franchise in the proposed World Football League. This was like putting a gun to a man's head and saying "deal" when the guy across the table is growling: "I'll play these."

"Football," said Pattison, who owns the Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association, "is a business and should be run like one."

Then he added the punch line: "I don't think the fans care who has the club. All they want is a contender."

What Pattison envisions is a sports conglomerate — the Blazers, Lions and that new World Football League club. And he would enlarge Empire Stadium to seat 55,000 as part of the bargain. Before that, the world team could play in Seatthe bargain. Before that, the world team could play in Seattle. But who's to bet that the NFL doesn't get to that new domed stadium before him?

It sounds like a mixed bag, it is. For under the Pattison plan, if the Lions agree, then he s committed to keeping the Lions in the CFL. Then what about the World League? That would come later, he said, implying that perhaps the club could run both franchises.

Three Steps to Approval

At least he is on the ground floor of any new league, and with Toronto also declared in under John Bassett Jr., then the CFL is in for a fight in one city so why not two?

But are the Lions for sale? Will the membership approve a switch from public to private ownership? Will the CFL allow such a sale?

Nothing is going to happen for a while, and even if the Lions don't make the playoffs in the Western Conference. First of all, every avenue of the new proposal will be studied and the Lion membership informed. For any change it would take a two-thirds majority vote of club members; seven of the nine clubs in the CFL would have to approve it, and all five Western Conference teams would have to say yes.

It's not the first time the Lions have been bid for. Harry Ornest tried to get control a few years ago but he was rebuffed. He was told the club was not for sale. It isn't likely either that the Western Conference clubs would look kindly on the possibility of a big city club getting stronger through private ownership, when teams even now are having a tough time making financial ends meet.

Then, of course, there's the matter of equalization payments. If the Lions drew more people, all the clubs would share in the benefit.

You can't blame Pattison for making his move now. His timing was never better. The Lions haven't been going anywhere in particular very quickly this season or for the last three or four years either. Attendance has fallen off noticeably, and there is a general lack of respect for the efforts put forth by management to correct the oversights resulting in the lacklustre performance on the field.

Other Interested Parties

Since the high spot of 1964, when the Lions won the Grey Cup, and 1965, when the club didn't even make the playoffs, the drop per game average has been 11,000. That's a lot of fans who haven't been showing up.

Still, it isn't easy to get a winner, even if you have the money to buy one. Toronto Argos are privately owned and all their years haven't been crowned with success, have they? Look at Montreal. The Als have been up and down like a yo-yo, too. That franchise hasn't been paying many dividends, and in a bigger city than Vancouver.

Besides, before any decision is made by the Lions, don't bet there would be other offers for the club if it is put up for sale. Ornest always wanted it; Bill Clancy, the ad man, made a pitch once too; Herb Capozzi is sports oriented and a past GM of the Lions. Why wouldn't he take a flyer? Then there's Denny Veitch who was ousted as GM in the great shakeup two years ago. He could be a vital cog in any new organization.

But now Pattison is first in line, and he has the cash. His offer will be acted on. He would bankroll the deal and have Clayton "Slim" Delbridge as chairman and front man. The organization would be composed of men of experience in sport, each club to have its own executive, and from there the conglomerate could expand.

And if the Lions membership doesn't buy it?

Can Watson Fire Blazers?

RON WARD
. . . not too happy

Times News Services

General manager Phil Watson took over as coach of Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association Tuesday, replacing Johnny McKenzie, who stepped down as playing coach to concentrate on playing his right-wing position.

McKenzie, 35, former star with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, stepped down Monday but said he made the decision last Friday in Edmonton where the Blazers defeated the Oilers 3-1.

He said he told Watson and club president Tiff Trimble: "I couldn't coach and play at the same time and that I would like to specifically concentrate on playing."

The move caused little surprise. Watson has been handling most of the coaching duties behind the bench, running practices and assessing personnel.

One reason for McKenzie's disenchantment is that he has scored only one goal in Blazers' first seven games. He has four assists.

Meanwhile, centre Ron Ward, off to a slow start after missing most of the Blazers' training camp because of flu and bronchitis, said he was discouraged that he wasn't getting more ice time with Blazers.

He said he felt Watson "is trying to prove to the owners they don't need me."

Watson, who has made no secret of his unhappiness at the time Ward is taking to get back in shape, replied "we think he can help us . . . but he hasn't done it so far."

On the ice, Edmonton defeated Toronto Toros 4-2 to move into a first-place tie in the Western Division while at Los Angeles, the Sharks finally won a home game by edging Cleveland Crusaders 4-3.

The Edmonton game was marred by a third-period brawl that resulted in five majors and two misconducts. Oiler winger Tom Gilmore drew two of the majors and a game misconduct for pummelling Toronto rookie Wayne Dillon.

The Toronto player didn't draw a penalty.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

GOALPOST GOES FLYING off anchor at St. Louis as defenceman Steve Durbano (2) of Blues gets slammed into piping by Boston's Fred O'Donnell (16) in successful attempt by Durbano to clear puck away from net while two other players crash into end boards. Defensive efforts by Blues were effective enough to produce 3-2 victory.

Cats' Netminding Takes on Promise

Victoria Cougars had three hunting objectives in mind when they launched a five-game jaunt to Prairie centres in the eWstern Canada Junior Hockey League.

The requisites were stronger goaltending, a steadier defence and, naturally, road success.

Cougars are still cold in the hunt for road success, and the tour winds up tonight in Regina. The problems on defence remain lukewarm but the goaltending situation warmed up for coach Ollie Dorohoy Tuesday night despite the fact Cougars dropped a 5-1 decision to Saskatoon Blades.

Dorohoy and general manager Eric Bishop both felt rookie Glen Anweiler "did a good job" against the Blades. A native of Saskatoon, Anweiler also played well in Sunday's 3-1 loss to Swift Current Broncos.

Anweiler also figures offensively, drawing an assist on Victoria's only goal, scored by rookie Brian Day.

Bob Bourne, Fred Williams, Ralph Klassen, Bernie Federko and Marty Feschuk connected for Blades, who led 1-0 after the first period and 3-1 after the second.

Cougars' defensive outlook improved Tuesday when X-rays revealed that rookie Lorry Gloeckner did not suffer a serious ankle injury as a result of a hit Saturday in Medicine Hat. It was first feared that the ankle was broken, but Gloeckner was cleared for duty Tuesday.

Another defenceman, 17-year-old Tim Williams, obtained in a trade with Flin Flon Bombers, joined the Cougars and will be inserted into the lineup tonight in Regina.

In Tuesday's only other game, Joey Girardin broke a 3-3 tie with less than four minutes remaining in regulation time to give Winnipeg Clubs a 4-3 victory oiver Kamloops Chiefs.

Trade Shifts Ten Players

ANAHEIM (AP) — California Angels have announced that pitcher Clyde Wright has been traded to Milwaukee Brewers in a 10-player deal that brings Brewers catcher Ellie Rodriguez to the Angels.

Other Angels going to Milwaukee are veteran relief-pitcher Steve Barber, outfielder Ken Berry, catcher Art Kusnyer and a player to be announced later.

MONEY WOES HIT INDIANS

CLEVLAND (CP) Cleveland Indians are in financial trouble and unless they they pay $133,238 owed the city by the end of the month, Cleveland finance director Andrew Putka says he will send the matter to the law department.

Putka said some of the bills date back to February and the American League baseball team owes $102,455 for rent alone.

Smith Gets Shutout; Leafs Keep East Lead

Times News Services

Two facts are emerging in the young National Hockey League season.

Vancouver Canucks are making signs they may be a contender in the Eastern division; Toronto Maple Leafs are definitely a team to be reckoned with. Both were also rans last year.

Canucks Tuesday night recorded their second straight home victory with a 3-0 victory over Atlanta Flames, while the Leafs came from behind in the final minutes to tie Minnesota North Stars 2-2 and retain their hold on first place.

Andre Boudrias connected for two goals to pace the Canucks to their first shutout of the year and goalkeeper Garry Smith's 15th of his NHL career before a capacity crowd of 15,570.

Boudrias gave Canucks a 1-0 lead in the second period after an Atlanta goal was disallowed by referee Ron Wicks, who ruled a Jacques Richard shot was intentionally steered in by his skate.

Don Lever made it 2-0 early in the third period on a rebound from Gerry O'Flaherty's shot and Boudrias got his second goal midway through the final period.

Smith kicked out 26 Atlanta shots and was particularly impressive early in the first period.

The Leafs, who defeated New York Rangers 3-2 Saturday night got their tie against the North Stars from rookie Bob Neely. The young defenceman had his shot deflected by North Star goalie Cesare Maniago with 3.25 remaining.

The shot ticked the stick of North Star defenceman Dennis O'Brien and went into the net just under the crossbar, ruining a sensational night in goal for Maniago who handled 38 shots.

The goal also removed a little bit of the tension of cutting teeth in the NHL for Neely, who gave away the winning goal Sunday night in Buffalo to the Sabres' Gilbert Perreault.

"I was thinking about it the night before this game but I told myself I had to forget it and look ahead," said Neely, who saw Minnesota's second goal go in off his skate.

In the Minnesota dressing room, Bill Goldsworthy, who scored his fifth of the season to give his club a 1-0 first-period lead, said he loss was "part of the jinx we've got going."

"Every damn game, something happens. The same thing happened in Detroit. We were ahead 4-2 and they ended up tying it off the face-off.

Dennis Hextall gave Minnesota a 2-0 edge in the second period before forward Inge Hammarstrom scored his third of the season for the Leafs.

Meanwhile, at St. Louis, the Blues got a goal from Wayne Merrick with just over four minutes remaining to give the Blues a 3-2 triumph over Boston Bruins.

It was the Bruins' second loss of the year, their first defeat coming at the hands of the Atlanta Flames and it left them tied with Buffalo for second place, one point behind Toronto.

Phil Esposito didn't score but he did get assists on the Boston goals scored by Ken Hodge on a Power play and Bobby Orr, Otherwise, Merrick held Esposito to five shots. Bob Kelly and rookie Mike Lampman scored the other St. Louis goals.

Sit-In at Derby As Pilot Named

DERBY, England (Reuter) — Derby County soccer club Tuesday appointed former Scottish international Dave MacKay as manager to replace Brian Clough, who resigned last week.

But as Derby chairman Sam Longson announced MacKay's appointment, a group of first team players who had sought Clough's reinstatement staged a three-hour sit-in at the club.

The players, who handed a letter to Longson Monday demanding that Clough and former assistant manager Peter Taylor be reinstated, said they wanted a meeting with the Derby directors. They later left the ground without seeing any of the board.

Outside-left Alan Hinton said: "We demand to be treated like men and granted a meeting with the men who are supposed to be running this football club."

MacKay, who played 22 times for Scotland and starred in the Tottenham Hotspur team which achieved the English League and Cup double in 1961, is also a former Derby captain. After ending his playing career he became manager of Swindon Town and then Nottingham Forest, the club he will leave to join Derby.

Nationals Get Seven Spots But Voters Ignore Mets

PETE ROSE
. . . leads voting

NEW YORK (AP) — Batting champions Pete Rose and Rod Carew, primarily singles hitters, and sluggers Willie Stargell and Reggie Jackson, leaders in home runs and runs batted in, were named today to the 1973 Major League All-Star team announced by The Associated Press.

National Leaguers dominated the voting, winning seven of 10 places on the squad selected by sports writers and broadcasters, but the NL champion New York Mets failed to land a player.

In balloting based on regular season performances only, Rose, the National League batting champion for the third time with a .338 average, was the top vote collector. The hustling Cincinnati Reds outfielder received 251 votes, 29 more than runner-up Stargell.

Stargell, the husky Pittsburgh Pirates outfielder-first baseman who played mostly left field during 1973 and led the NL in home runs with 44 and in RBIs with 119, accumulated 231 votes.

Jackson, the pacesetter of the American League and World Series champion Oakland Athletics won the other outfield berth with 200 votes. He won the AL home run title with 32 and the RBI championship with 117.

Carew, Minnesota Twins' slick second baseman, led infielders with 136 votes. Joining him in the infield were first baseman Tony Perez of Cincinnati Reds, shortstop Chris Speier of San Francisco Giants and third baseman Darrell Evans of Atlanta Braves.

Johnny Bench, Cincinnati's irrepressible catcher, was the only repeater from 1972.

Ron Bryant of the San Francisco Giants, the only National League pitcher with 20 or more victories—he had 24—was chosen as the All-Star left-handed hurler, and fireballing Nolan Ryan of the California Angels, who set a major league strikeout record with 383, was picked as the top right-hander.

Hank Aaron, Atlanta's 39-year-old slugger who hit 40 homers for a career total of 713, only one short of Babe Ruth's all-time record, wound up fifth among the outfielders with 124 votes. San Francisco's Bobby Bonds was fourth with 157.

Anti-Hunting Sentiments Moving Among Urbanites

Does hunting in British Columbia have a future?

This question prompted a visit to Jim Hatter, an enthusiastic hunter, doctor of zoology (wildlife management) and director of the provincial fish and wildlife branch

"Sure, I think it has a good future," he replied.

"Unfortunately, hunters the world over are running into a bit of an obstacle nowadays. Quite a few people don't go along with the concept of hunting and we're feeling it here."

Although this anti-hunting sentiment hasn't yet reached the pitch one finds in parts of the United States, it is increasing in British Columbia.

"It stems from the urban areas — really from a lack of association with the out-of-doors," Jim explained.

Some of the blame for this lack of understanding must rest with the media — press, radio and television

Slanted reporting, either intentional or based upon misinformation, has often served "to make hunting look like a shabby activity"

"It's hard for us, who have hunted, to realize there are people who know absolutely nothing about wildlife. A deer to them is something like their dog or their cat. They've never seen the carcass of an animal which supplies the steaks they buy in the butcher shop," Hatter explained.

"I refuse to believe it in a way, but I kind of think a lot of people who go to the butcher shops and buy domestic meat don't realize that animal was killed in a slaughterhouse.

"These people are completely inconsistent. For the most part, they go along with eating meat that is apparently killed in a very proper way—whereas hunting, to them, is a cruel activity.

While first pondering ths whole issue, I felt that vegetarians really had the only legitimate right to criticize hunting. But then, even vegetarians wear shoes.

But back to Jim:

"I believe we've got to give quite a bit of attention to people who are opposed to hunting, not to polarize them, not to create a conflict between hunters and non-hunters, but to try and do two things:

"If possible, to make them see reason.

"To make sure the neutral people, the great numbers of people who couldn't care one way or the other, don't fall into that camp too.

"I think we should encourage people to try and understand what hunting is all about—that it's not wrong to go out and shoot a deer or a game bird. It's a very natural thing.

"The hunters themselves aren't speaking up too well on their own behalf," added Hatter.

He explained most hunters need both information and answers to throw back to their critics.

"The fish and game clubs are singularly inactive when it comes to getting out and speaking for themselves. Sportsmen, as a whole, failed to respond to some of the articles which appeared over the matter of hunting in East Sooke Park.

"We took the stand that the hunting recreationist should have some opportunity to use the park as well as other people," said Jim.

Personally, I disagree with that one point, but to go on:

"The people who live in the country, in the rural areas of northern British Columbia, don't know what these people are talking about.

By contrast a recent conference of urban-oriented educators, gathered to discuss the teaching of environmental matters, were mostly anti-hunters. And hunting is a part of the environment.

Hatter goes along with some of the ideas found in a new book by Paul Shepard called The Tender Carnivore and the Sacred Game.

"Man is programmed as a hunter-gatherer basically," Jim explained. "He's not programmed to live in cities like we're doing . . . in large numbers."

As Shepard says in his book, the world of hunting and gathering peoples was a "life founded on the integrity of solitude and human sparseness, in which men do not become a disease on their environment but live in harmony with each other and with nature. The ways of the hunters are beginning to show us how we are failing as human beings and as organisms in a world beset by a 'success' that hunters never wanted."

In a recent letter, written to a concerned citizen, Hatter said:

"Peace and the future of mankind would appear to rest not with disassociating ourselves from nature and the past but rather in emulating more closely the way of life in which we evolved.

"To deny man the right to hunt is to repudiate history and to place ourselves above nature."

"I don't believe any of this to be an elaborate justification.

LEE MACPHAIL
. . . he'll take over

CHICAGO (AP) — American League owners named Lee MacPhail, general manager of New York Yankees, to succeed Joe Cronin as president of the league Tuesday, effective Jan. 1, 1974.

Cronin, 67, will preside over the American League meetings in Houston next December. MacPhail, 55, said he would like to have a couple of months to clear up his business with the Yankees.

MacPhail, who resides in New York, said he hasn't decided on where he will re-establish the American League office and said it is "quite possible to leave Boston.

"I have no immediate plans for any changes as of now. I want to have time to talk with Joe because we have a lot of things to discuss. I hate to change from being active or leaving. I spent one year in the commissioner's office and I don't like being neutral.

"But neither did I want to miss this opportunity."

MacPhail said Cronin said the owners discussed other league matters and that the American League will make every effort to make the designated hitter rule permanent. Now it is on a three-year experimental basis.

Cronin read a statement from the Yankees that it was with great "trepidation" that the Yanks gave MacPhail permission to accept the appointment. The Yankees said they regretted his loss but that the loss to the team was the gain of the league.

"I echo those sentiments," said Cronin. "We couldn't have a more qualified man to represent the American League."

MacPhail said:

"The new ownership of the Yankees had nothing to do with my leaving the club. I found my relationship with the new owners excellent."

Cronin, who still has two years to go on his contract, said he will remain as chairman of the board when MacPhail takes over as president.

Thus Cronin is ending a 14-year reign as the league's fourth president, during which it expanded to 10 from eight teams—adding the then Los Angeles Angels and the new Washington Senators (the old ones had moved to Minnesota)—and then to 12 with the addition of Seattle Pilots, now the Milwaukee Brewers, and the Kansas City Royals.

When he succeeded the late Will Harridge in 1959, Cronin moved the league offices from Chicago to Boston.

Cronin has achieved virtually every attainable success in the game of baseball, beginning with his selection as Most Valuable Player in the American League in 1930 when he batted .346 for the original Senators.

Claremont Scorers On Target

Three players took care of all the scoring Tuesday as Claremont overpowered Parkland 10-0 in Victoria High School Soccer League action at Claremont.

Dave Robbins and Dave Elwell each scored four goals while Bob Lee added a pair to help Claremont grab a share of third place with Mount View.

Robbins, normally a fullback, looked right at home in his first appearance on the forward line. Elwell's spree gave him a total of 12 goals this season and third place in the individual scoring race.

It was Parklands 13th straight setback.

Yogi's New Contract Sign of Appreciation

NEW YORK (AP) — Yogi Berra, who managed New York Mets to the 1973 National League pennant, Tuesday had his managerial contract renewed for three more years.

Berra will receive an estimated $75,000 a year.

"There was never any doubt of his returning as manager," Bob Scheffing, Mets' general manager, said after a meeting with the club's board of directors. "The evidence of that is a three-year contract."

Sheffing said the board of directors meeting was a mere formality to approve Berra's contract.

The contract equals the longest ever received by a Mets' manager—the same received by the late Gil Hodges.

Berra had just finished a two-year contract after the Mets were beaten by the Oakland A's in the World Series.

In his three years of managing Berra has had two pennant winners. He also led the 1964 New York Yankees to the American League pennant, but was fired after his team lost the World Series to St. Louis.

Hampered by injuries, the Mets got off to a bad start and Berra was believed to be on his way out as manager at mid-season. On Aug. 30 the Mets stood in last place and then made their move and won the pennant on the last day of the season.

Games' Group Blamed For Creating 'Mudhole'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver park board commissioner George Puil has charged that the Swangard Stadium playing field is totally ruined as the result of renovation work undertaken for last summer's Canada Games.

Puil said rain last week had changed the field at Burnaby, into a "muddy swamp that you can walk into up to your knees."

"The Canada Games committee should pay for it," said Puil. "They precipitated this mudhole."

He said the damage to the field was caused by the elimination of the crown to meet international competition standards.

Park board chairman Art Cowie said the renovation method was fine in principle and had worked in other fields in the area.

"It was not constructed properly. If there is any legal action, that's where it should be."

Cowie suggested that the board investigate the situation further before attempting to assign blame.

Commissioner Bill DuMoulin said he was angry because the renovation project "took what was a gorgeous playing field and turned it into swamp."

Puil tried to get the board to demand payment from the games committee or to launch a full investigation of the design and methods employed.

But the board finally decided to leave it to the Central Park committee — consisting of representatives of the Vancouver and Burnaby park boards — to consider future action.

The plan to renovate the field was approved last winter by the Central Park committee despite public outcrys that the scheme would force suspension of a season of junior sport at the stadium and could endanger the playing surface.

Reynolds' Girls Awarded Second

Reynolds topped Mount View 15-11, 16-14 and defeated Esquimalt 15-13, 16-14 to take second place in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Volleyball League during final action Tuesday.

Reynolds tied Esquimalt in points but took the runner-up spot on the basis of a better record in games between the teams.

Mount View split by beating Esquimalt 15-13, 16-14 and took sixth spot because of a better record against Parkland, which was tied in points for the placing.

In other final games, Claremont had a 1-3 record, Victoria split 2-2 and Mt. Douglas finished up 3-1.

Balon Joins Quebec Club

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Les Nordiques have signed left-winger Dave Balon to a World Hockey Association contract.

General manager Jacques Plante said the signing came after the club negotiated a deal with Los Angeles Sharks, the team that held Balon's WHA rights.

Balon, 35, a veteran of more than 700 National Hockey League games, played last season with Vancouver Canucks.

TROTTERS MAKE HABIT OF DEAD-HEAT DUELS

MONTREAL (CP) — The United States Trotting Association has confirmed that when trotters Wonderful Gene and Navy Admiral finished first in a dead heat at Blue Bonnets Raceway last Saturday, it marked the first time in harness racing history that two horses finished in such a position in consecutive meetings.

Wonderful Gene, a four-year-old gelding owned by Don Morritt of Thorndale, Ont., and Navy Admiral, a seven-year-old owned by Jean-Paul Toulouse of Montreal, had earlier finished first in a dead heat Oct. 12.

It took a thorough check of record books by the USTA to determine that the two horses had set a new mark and an association spokesman said the odds against two horses finishing in a dead heat with each other in two straight races were astronomical.

The first time out Wonderful Gene led all the way only to have Navy Admiral come from behind and gain the dead heat at the wire. The second time the two met the procedure was reversed with Wonderful Gene catching Navy Admiral at the wire.

Chicago Joins Grid League

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago was awarded a franchise Tuesday in the newly-formed World Football League which is scheduled to begin play in July, 1974.

Gary Davidson, league commissioner, said the Chicago franchise was awarded to Thomas J. Origer, a construction executive, as principal owner, and Nick Mileti of Cleveland, an owner in Cleveland Indians, Cleveland Cavaliers and Cleveland Crusaders.

At a news conference, Davidson said the league will include "at least eight and probably 12 teams" in the first season.

Davidson said that other cities which will field teams include New York, Honolulu, Toronto, Boston, Los Angeles and possibly Tokyo.

A Good Leg Exercise

Your legs need constant exercise to strengthen them. Bad legs end more promising careers than do any other part of an athlete's body.

Here's an exercise you and your teammates can take. Have a player hold a stick across his body and you also grasp it. While he digs in to resist you, push with all the strength of your legs.

Learn breath control at the same time. We all tend to stop breathing when we concentrate on an extra hard push or pull. All we do is shut off the supply of oxygen to our blood stream.

Learn to breathe evenly all the time instead of holding your breath at times of maximum effort.

Vikings Start Tourney At Home Against Birds

West Unniversity Athletic Association rugby championships takes place at Centennial Stadium Thursday when University of Victoria Vikings meet UBC Thunderbirds.

Both teams move on to Vancouver Saturday and Sunday for the balance of the four-team, round-robin tournament that also involves Calgary Dinosaurs and Alberta Golden Bears.

Calgary and Alberta also meet in a first-round game before travelling to Vancouver.

Vikings, coached by Alan Rees, tuned up for Thursday's test with an upset victory last weekend over Oak Bay Wanderers in a Victoria Rugby Union game.

The UBC-UVic match starts at 3 p.m. with a preliminary contest between UVic Jutes and UBC set for 2 on the P-hut field.

Also scheduled for UVic on the weekend is a basketball referees' clinic at the gymnasium starting at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. Instructors will be John Olsen, provincial coach, and George Siborne, an international referee from Vancouver. The agenda includes a comprehensive study of scorekeeping and timekeeping under Canadian Amateur Basketball Association and international rules.

Enrolment has been high but there are still openings. Information is available from the UVic athletic department, 477-6911, local 790.

Junior Clubs Start Semis On Thursday

Playoff action starts Thursday for the four top finishers in the 10-team Greater Victoria Junior High School Soccer League.

Reynolds, which won seven and tied two of nine league games to wind up in first place, goes against Highbrock in one semi-final series.

In the other two-game series, runner-up Arbutus tackles Oak Bay, which shared third place with Highrock.

Arctics Chilled After Hot Start

Hotel Douglas shook off the shock of a slow start and went on to trim Arctic Installations 52-47 at S. J. Willis Junior High School during the opening game of the season for both Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League clubs.

GOP Leaders Give Nixon Blunt Terms

By LOU CANNON
An Analysis

WASHINGTON (WP) — House of Representatives Republican leaders bluntly warned President Nixon Tuesday that they would not "go to the wall" with him in blocking impeachment proceedings unless he made his Watergate tapes available to the court.

They also urged him to continue the office of Watergate Special Prosecutor.

Soon after the message was carried back to Nixon by counsellor Bryce Harlow, the president reversed himself and decided to turn over the tapes to Judge John J. Sirica.

"Damn all this executive privilege," Rep. Jack Edwards of Alabama told Harlow. "People are saying the tapes have to be turned over."

White House officials, in both on-the-record and background conversations, gave a variety of reasons for the president's change of heart.

Among them was the threat of impeachment, the strongly negative reaction from Republican congressmen and the public to Nixon's firing of Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox and the press conference Tuesday by Elliot Richardson, who resignel as attorney-general rather than dismiss Cox.

"Elliot's press conference was pretty tough on the president," said one highly-placed official.

At a White House press conference, Alexander Haig Jr. said that the president's turnaround on the tapes was made Tuesday morning after "very painful and agonizing discussions" with his staff.

At noon, the president instructed Charles Wright, a University of Texas law professor who is serving as special counsel, to tell Sirica that the tapes would be turned over.

Haig and Wright acknowledged that they miscalculated public reaction to the Friday night announcement that the president would make the tapes available through Sen. John Stennis (Dem.—Miss.).

Wright said that his own mood Friday night after the president's decision was announced was "euphoric."

He said he checked out of his hotel Saturday morning thinking his White House work was done.

"We did not think Cox would take the action he did," Wright said.

Harlow's mission at Tuesday's morning meeting with the GOP congressmen had been to explain the reasons for Nixon's action in firing Cox.

But he was met with a hostile group of Republicans.

Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, leader of the House Republican Conference, told Harlow that it was necessary for the president to turn over the tapes if he wanted Republicans to defend him in the House.

The official White House view was that Nixon fired Cox as the aftermath of an effort to reach a genuine compromise on the Watergate tapes.

Haig said that on the weekend of Oct. 13 the president determined that he would make "a herculean effort to resolve the constitutional crisis."

The result was the agreement to permit Stennis to listen to the tapes and report on them.

Haig said that Stennis was selected to listen to the tapes for four reasons: "No one was better able to assess the national security aspects" than Stennis; his "honesty and integrity" were unquestioned; he is a former judge; and he is a Democrat.

By last Thursday, it was apparent that Cox could not accept the proposal because of "his strong desire" to pursue additional tapes and papers "involving private conversations of the president," Haig said.

That was "not the kind of co-operative effort we had hoped for," Haig added.

On Friday night, when the decision was announced, "we all assumed" that Cox had three options, Haig explained.

He could accept the fact that he was receiving the information he sought; he could have determined that the prohibition on his seeking additional documents was not acceptable and resign; or he could rebut and challenge the president.

When he took the latter course and defied the president in a televised press conference Saturday, Haig said Nixon had no alternative but to dismiss him.

Both Haig and Wright said that they had not heard the tapes.

However, they expressed confidence the tapes would support the president's explanation of his lack of knowledge of the Watergate coverup.

ANOTHER LIBRARY STUDY

Several companies will be asked to submit bids for setting up a performance appraisal system for the Greater Victoria Public Library.

A library official said today that it would not be an efficiency study.

Instead, it was described as a "method of personnel performance appraisal of all levels of staff, utilizing the management by objectives principle".

The library board agreed unanimously Tuesday that such a system would help the library give better service and that a consultant should be employed to put the system in operation.

At its Sept. 25 meeting the board heard a proposal from the Victoria firm of F. R. Machin and Associates Ltd. to set up such a system for $5,000. Company spokesman Frank Machin had submitted the proposal at the request of library director Don Miller. At that meeting Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry had asked Miller why only one company had been contacted.

The board decided Tuesday that other companies should also be requested to submit proposals.

Emphasizing that the system was not under study, such as the $12,000 Woods, Gordon survey that led to the firing of the then-chief librarian John Lort, Miller said he had discussed the proposed system with the city's personnel manager.

"As far as doing it (setting up the system) on an in-house basis," Miller said, "the city doesn't have the staff to do this. I know we certainly don't have to staff. The level of staff was greatly reduced after the Woods, Gordon survey."

Miller said the library was 14th in size out of 26 Canadian libraries and 24th in the amount the library spent on salaries.

He said that library staffers favor such a system.

Big Business Leaders Talk Co-Operation

TOKYO (WP) — Nongovernmental leaders from the United States, Europe and Japan appealed here today for three-sided co-operation among the major industrial groupings to cope with a world in which U.S. power is losing its position of dominance.

The occasion was the founding meeting of the Trilateral Commission, 180 businessmen, political scientists and other leaders described Tuesday as "the leading citizens of their continents."

The idea for the three-cornered commission was attributed to U.S. banker David Rockefeller, who expressed hope that the new forum will help the major industrial nations acquire the habit of working together rather than at cross-purposes.

The initial public session, held in the conference hall of Keidanren, Japan's big business confederation, featured statements of high purpose and ambitious goals from the commission's leaders and expressions of caution and reserve by some of the Japanese members.

The outspoken Japanese expressed a fear that the proposed three-cornered leadership could give rise to resentment and suspicion from Communist powers and from poorer nations in the non-Communist world.

These Japanese delegates called for extreme caution in public statements by the new commission, and one proposed unsuccessfully that a political task force study on the world political crisis be withheld from publication to avoid controversy.

Among other things, the report declared that confusion about fundamental changes in the relations between nations was a major cause of two world wars within this century and presented a great challenge to the stability and well-being of the world today.

The United States, Western Europe and Japan generate nearly two-thirds of the annual output of the entire world and thus "the problems of money, trade, investment, resources and peace cannot be creatively tackled unless they co-operate," the report said.

In a statement of purpose, the 34-member executive committee of the commission called upon their governments to co-operate more closely and "to refrain from unilateral actions incompatible with their interdependence and from actions detrimental to other regions."

Among harmful unilateral actions mentioned in discussion Tuesday was the recent United States embargo on soybeans and other agricultural commodities.

Shortages of world resources, including food and petroleum, could breed new rivalries and cause widening disparities which are a threat to world stability and an affront of social justice, the policy statement declared.

Former U.S. arms control negotiator Gerard Smith, chairman of the North American delegation to the new commission, said the United States might find in the trilateral relationship, a means of retreating from its dominant role in the world since the Second World War.

Recaptured Con Charged With Murder

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — One of the three escaped prisoners from Collins Bay penitentiary captured here Sunday was charged Wednesday with murder in connection with the death last week of another convict.

Stephen Czuper, 34, of Hungary appeared in provincial court here Wednesday charged with the murder of Joseph Victor Martin, 41, of Tilbury, Ont.

He was remanded in custody to Oct. 31.

Martin's bullet-riddled body was found last Wednesday on the bank of a creek in nearby Malden Centre.

Czuper was arrested Sunday night in a raid by Windsor police on a city apartment. They said he was alone at the time of his capture and unarmed.

Phoney 'Fugitives' Seek New Identities

HANOVER, West Germany (Reuter) — The breathless young German, his clothes soaked with the waters of the River Elbe, staggered into the West German village and announced his escape from East Germany.

Authorities took him under their wing until they examined his shoes, a fashionable pair of West German leather boots which no East German would have been able to obtain, let alone afford.

Subsequent investigations revealed that the "fugitive" was one of the small-time West German crooks and debtors who stage mock escapes across the heavily-guarded border between the two German states in order to gain a new identity.

Border guards say the phoney fugitives who arrive without papers are fighting a losing battle.

"We ask them, for instance, how's old so-and-so in the village or town they claim to come from and they never answer properly," one official said.

Border guards say that such attempts are made about once every two months.

One case history is that of a young man who turned up in a border village, saying he had escaped from East Germany.

"I have lived in the woods for four months but now I am at the end of my strength", he told border police, who immediately handed him over to the criminal investigation department.

"All right, his clothes were ragged and he did look as if he had been in the woods for some time," said an investigating officer. "But something about the story didn't ring true. We took his fingerprints and they matched those of a man with a record."

West German officials refuse to issue figures for the number of real refugees who flee each year across the 800-mile border which grew out of the post-war demarcation line between the Soviet and Western occupation zones.

This number does not include the hundreds of East Germans who have paid large sums to be whisked out of their Communist homeland by dealers who smuggle refugees along the newly opened transit routes between West Berlin and West Germany.

Their activity has been condemned by East and West German officials alike, although Bonn government policy is that no East German—except certain criminals—will be turned back, whatever their means of escape.

For genuine fugitives, the dangers include self-firing scatter-guns, marksmen, trained dogs, mines and trip-wires.

Border police regularly report instances of young East Germans who are shot trying to cross the border.

West Berliners, by now used to the concrete wall that slices through the city, are no longer surprised to hear the rattle of automatic rifle fire late at night as East German guards open fire on their countrymen attempting to flee.

Under a succession of treaties, West Germans now may cross the border for up to 30 days a year, provided they are invited. Some East Germans are allowed to visit West Germany on urgent family business, provided they are not classified as "official secrets carriers"—a term applied at the discretion of East German authorities.

Coalition Reshuffled

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Premier Edmond Leburton has reshuffled his nine-month-old coalition government, cutting it from 36 to 28 members.

The reshuffle of the three-party coalition followed several days of cabinet and party meetings on internal disputes and two calls by Leburton on King Baudouin.

Leburton dropped nine members from his team — two ministers and seven secretaries of state. Their portfolios were taken over by other members of the government, while one new secretary of state was appointed.

The major change was the resignation of Edouard Anseels, communications minister and senior socialist leader. The announcement said Anseele resigned for health reasons.

But political sources said the Social Christians — who are in the coalition with the Socialists and Liberals — had demanded his resignation because they held him politically responsible for serious financial mismanagement in the post and telephone services.

Cattle Raising Advice Clashes

WINNIPEG (CP) — Livestock producers in the United States are being urged to cut back production this year while their counterparts in Canada are told the demand for meat will increase substantially in the years ahead.

This advice was offered by two sources during the final day of a world grain seminar sponsored by the Canada Grains Council.

A. P. Van Stolk of the Royal Trade Commission of The Netherlands said it is unlikely that there will be enough feed grains produced in the world this year to expand animal production at the current rate of about three per cent a year.

"In order to make supply and demand balance, the U.S. should certainly reduce animal numbers in the order of four per cent," he said.

Van Stolk estimated that such a reduction in production could raise prices about 30 and 35 per cent.

Meanwhile, W. E. Jarvis, Canada's assistant deputy minister of agriculture, predicted a rapid expansion in production of meat and use of feed grains and protein meals for feeding livestock.

Total consumption of meat is projected to approach 6.3 million pounds by 1980, an increase of about 34 per cent over last year's figure, he said.

"One of the many opportunities facing Canadian livestock farmers is to produce sufficient meat to satisfy what appears, at this point, to be a strongly growing consumer demand for meat."

Jarvis estimated increased livestock production will require an increase of about 20 per cent in the quantity of grains and protein meal for oilseeds used in feeding, but he noted that grain farmers are capable of much higher output if conditions are satisfactory.

Language Act 'Hurts' Unity

CALGARY (CP) — Forcing the French language on English speaking Canadians is the biggest single cause of disunity, says Doug Ligertwood, president of the Western Canada Party.

Ligertwood said in an interview his party feels the Official Languages Act is discriminatory and unconstitutional and should be repealed.

The French language is becoming the first language used on product labels and mail boxes among other things, he said. Government and company officials also were being forced to learn French to gain promotions.

"It's not going to stop at whether he can speak French," he said. "It's going to stop at whether his last name is French."

Ligertwood predicted that as a result of French being taught in the schools there will be "French ghettos" around the country and the people in them will not be able to communicate with those outside.

People living in Quebec have been held back because they have not learned English, he said. They have been hindered by the Roman Catholic Church's control over labor unions, language and education in Quebec, not by the rest of Canada.

The Western Canada Party, with 500 paid members, is not a separatist party, he said. It believed that political parties should be regional, rather than national in representation.

There were four regions—the west, Ontario, Quebec cand The Maritimes—each with its own way of life and its own economic structure. Each region should have equal representation in federal politics.

The Western Canada Party wants discriminatory freight rates and tariffs removed so that industry can develop naturally in western Canada, he said. It also proposed as employment incentives profit-sharing schemes for employees in industry, unemployment and welfare payments geared to the poverty level and tight control of immigration during periods of unemployment.

Other party policies include retention of the monarchy, the turning over of government corporations to private enterprise, protection of the individual from monopolies and cartels and fixed election dates and terms of office.

'. . . I Have Seen My Friends Die . . . Their Blood in the Sand'—Israeli

We Want Peace . . . Not Politics

By GERALD CLARK
Montreal Star Editor
Special to the Times

WITH ISRAELI FORCES IN EGYPT — It was just a little past dawn and an Israeli soldier was sharing his breakfast with me—a tin of sardines and a tin of plums—when his tank officer came over and said quietly, "The radio has just announced there will be a ceasefire, if the Arabs agree."

The soldier, whose first name is Shmuel, and who is a car mechanic when he is not in the army, listened to details, and then cursed.

"We want peace, not politics," he said. "I have been fighting for 16 days. I have seen my friends die, their blood in the sand. In two, three more days we would finish off the Egyptians.

"If we don't finish them now they will try to hit us again — in three months, in three years."

Shmuel, who is 21, lost two brothers in previous wars. He does not want his youngest brother to die in the next war.

And so my initial impression of an Israeli soldier's reaction to the big news is one of indignation, not elation.

Later in the day, after hearing several other opinions, I alter this impression.

The over-all feeling, I think, is of sober contentment that this war — the Yom Kippur War, the Sixteen Day War, or whatever it will be called in history books — is over, at least on this front.

No Gloating

But there is absolutely no gloating, no sense of victory as there was in 1967. For while the Israelis can claim, quite legitimately, a brilliant tactical triumph after their initial setback, it is not like the culmination of the Six Day War when there was joy, euphoria, a relief that the war to end all wars had been fought.

Today there is fatigue, mental as well as physical, and worse, a fear that nothing has been resolved.

But it is indeed a brilliant, if bloody, triumph in its way, illustrated partly by the gains in Syria but mainly by the thrust into Egypt.

I am among the score or so from the international press privileged to witness the thrust. A Swedish reporter and photographer and I, accompanied by an Israeli escort officer, should have driven across the canal and on to the west side Sunday night.

That was the plan, but higher officers vetoed it at the last moment, after nightfall, because of heavy Egyptian shelling of approaches to the bridges.

And so we spent the night on the east bank, with a desert unit, watching the Israeli-Egyptian battle in what turned out to be the start of its last 24 hours.

In every war, it seems, no matter how mobile it becomes, there must be scenes reminiscent of films of the First World War, with the night sky illuminated by flares sent up by both sides.

And the big guns keep pounding, their flashes sometimes coming with such intensity that they appear like a premature sunrise.

Topsy-Turvy

But in this topsy-turvy war some of the guns are Egyptian on the east bank, shelling Israelis on the west bank. For there are areas held by both sides on both sides.

The Egyptians cling to strips of territory on the Israeli bank of the Suez canal running from two to five miles in depth. In turn, the Israelis, when the ceasefire came into effect, were in a salient on the Egyptian side, south of Ismailia, 19 miles deep and 23 miles wide.

But I did not know the statistics the night before as I struggled for a few hours sleep, in the cabin of a lorry, against the chill of a desert night. There was the incessant noise — the rumble not only of the big guns but of tanks and other armored vehicles moving into what was once a beachhead but is now a very substantial piece of Israeli-held territory.

And when I finally did cross over, early yesterday morning, it was something of an anti-climax, because the canal itself was so inocuous in appearance, just a narrow little waterway, with the pontoon bridge — less than two hundred yards long — so simple, even to its frayed plank flooring.

This goes back to the time when the canal was dug, when sand, and later silt, was piled on the east bank, killing any chance of vegetation. But on the west bank there grew, into abundance, date palms and eucalyptus trees.

The irony is that the rugged high sand bank, which should have provided the Israelis with a natural defence, failed to keep out Egyptian attackers.

Now, of course, it was the Israeli assaulters who had proved their skill and deadly effectiveness.

Just a couple of miles inland we encountered the first massive example, the site of an obviously fierce battle and evidence of the surprise with which Israelis hit Egyptians from the rear. It was an old military base, used by British troops during the Second World War.

But now the bodies of scores of Egyptians lay rotting under the hot sun, the sickly sweet stench so reminiscent of any war, made more graphic by the sight of charred remains of men who tried to clamber from their tank turrets only to stay there.

The Israelis had removed their own dead by now, but not the blood-soaked Israeli tunics which dotted the grounds among the shattered concrete buildings.

The campsite was at a road junction with signposts reading Ismailia 23 kilometers, Suez 69 kilometers. The salient itself reaches to within 50 miles of Cairo, but if that sounds dramatic it is hardly significant.

Unnecessary

One doubts if the Israelis ever intended to expend themselves on such an unnecessary target, any more than they would want, on the other front, to lose lives to reach Damascus which lies 25 miles from their reach.

The proximity to Cairo has a psychologically biting ring. But one of the main motives for the incursion into Egypt was to throttle anti-aircraft missile sites.

This the Israelis have virtually succeeded in doing, even though occasionally yesterday, while the fighting was supposedly winding down but in fact was more intense than ever, I saw white and brown puffs in the sky, denoting SAM missiles still in operation against Israeli jets.

Black puffs, which I did not see, would have meant hits, and so there is a conclusion that only the less sophisticated and less effective SAMS are still functioning.

The other principal motive was to show how hard and fast Israelis could penetrate into Egyptian territory once reinforcements were brought into action.

The day-long stream of vehicles — tanks, half tracks, personnel carriers — was almost endless, not only over the bridge on which I had crossed but on another, which lay nearby.

A third bridge was also in operation, in addition to the ones which the Egyptians had built and were now in Israeli possession.

The Swedish photographer got a picture he had been after for two weeks — a truckload of Egyptian prisoners heading one way while a truckload of Israelis headed the other way — forward.

Later I spoke to one of the prisoners whose name was Achmed, and he said he had no idea the Israelis had come across the west bank, officers had taken radios away from Egyptian troops so they would not know of this demoralizing development.

The first Achmed suspected anything was wrong was when his officer sped off by car for Cairo, leaving his men behind. The next thing Achmed knew, he was confronted by an Israeli tank.

Now, sitting in the hot sun, the flies buzzing about him mercilessly, Achmed was talkative enough but he was not the cringing type of Egyptian I recall from the Six Day War. When he was asked what he thought of Sadat, Achmed said simply: "He made a mistake. He said Israel would lose the war."

It was an honest comment, while a few years back Achmed's counterpart would have been inclined to curse Nasser and all his descendants.

But then, in almost no respect, has this been like the Six Day War.

Certainly there is no clear-cut victor. The Israelis achieved military success, but any political gains may prove elusive. This was the dominant undertone of troop reaction.

There were some soldiers who spoke like Shmuel. "We should go on to Cairo," said a 26-year-old taxi driver from Tel Aviv. "Why?" he was asked. He merely shrugged his shoulders, because there was no realistic explanation.

But the majority, at worst, were merely skeptical whether the fighting was really over.

At midday, when more than six hours still remained before the ceasefire would take effect, and Cairo Radio had yet to announce the news of the security council resolution, let alone Egypt's decision, an officer wiped the film of sand from his tank goggles and said he was sure the Egyptians would say no.

"Then we will finish off the 300 or 400 tanks they have left" of the 1,000 which they put along the canal.

But he added: "I hope the news of a ceasefire comes true. I hate war. You have to make it when you are attacked, but I hate it."

There is some emotionalism about cleaning up the Egyptians, but on the whole the attitude is muted. Another officer, a 48-year-old real estate agent from Haifa, said: "For me the end of any war is good. Maybe they will have more sense next time."

The "they" refers, of course, to the Egyptians, and it refers, as do almost all other comments, to the military aspect alone. The political side is either ignored or considered too complex to discuss.

A sergeant, a Moroccan Jew, said in French, "The news? It is good, we want peace. We will keep what we have."

When I said there was a long political fight ahead, that Israel might have to go back to the borders it had before 1967, he was shocked.

"Never," he said, "it would be our death."

And that is the general response.

"This piece," said one man, waving at the salient on the west bank, "yes, we will give it up. Who needs it?"

Face to Face

But his assumption was that no Israeli government would make a deal returning the whole of the Sinai, or Gaza, or the Golan Heights, or Jerusalem.

The interpretation about the 1967 United Nations resolution is quite different from that of the Arab world.

And peace negotiations are taken by Israelis to mean face-to-face meetings while the Arabs see only indirect contacts.

In any case, as the day wore on, it was clear that any protracted delay by Cairo in accepting the ceasefire would work to Israel's advantage.

Huge bulldozers were already pushing wider roads in the salient, to make way for many more tanks and armored cars including some captured from the Egyptians and hastily repainted in Israeli olive green.

That essentially is what military language means when it talks of "superiority," being able to organize and advance swiftly, moving in daylight free from air attack.

The shelling in the salient continued but was not gross, and troops went on with their advance.

As dusk approached, the radio brought news finally that the Egyptians had accepted.

One reservist, a man in his late 30s, said quietly, "Perhaps we will be home for Sabbath," for the weekend.

The news announcer told of the Syrians fighting on. A soldier said, "I have a brother in that front."

There was sporadic shooting on the Sinai front last night, but generally the ceasefire was observed.

Meanwhile, the Israelis are deeper into Egypt, their strongest weapon in a war which no one has won.

CROWN FAILS TO TESTIFY

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dusan Pumpa Surovy of Winnipeg, fined $500 last May for male prostitution, Tuesday won his appeal against conviction and sentence when the Crown failed to appear at the hearing before Judge G. J. Barkman in county court.

At his trial earlier this year, court was told Surovy advertised body rubs for women in their own homes on a confidential basis. A policewoman had met Surovy and testimony indicated that during the meeting the man had suggested the fee for a body rub could include sexual relations.

U.S. Exam Used

EDMONTON (CP) — Some Canadian students pre-registering at a Canadian university are being advised to write American entrance examinations, the legislature was told Tuesday.

Grant Notley, leader of the New Democratic Party, called the action "scandalous" since the content of U.S. tests would not necessarily apply to Canadian conditions.

Jim Foster, minister of advanced education, said in reply that the University of Calgary gives students the option of writing the United States exams.

However, high school marks and teachers' recommendations also were taken into account and the American exams are not mandatory.

Gas Use Claimed

Brian Nurse, 17, told the Harradence Commission for inquiry into alleged brutality by guards at the institute that assistant deputy warden Allan Merrian sprayed gas from an aerosol can into his eyes from a foot away.

He said he was being moved from a dormitory to isolation for an infraction of prison regulations at the time.

Crop Project

SASKATOON (CP) — The University of Saskatchewan says it will help finance a $4-million project to stimulate the development of new technology and products based on a wide range of agricultural crops.

The project, to be built in Saskatoon by the federal government, will provide a facility for producing oil, protein and starch from various crops from which evaluation of new foods, chemicals and other products can be made.

Prison Plaudit

BRANDON (CP) — A letter to the editor of the Brandon Sun defends the legal aid system in Manitoba against its critics, contending the program causes police to be "more thorough in their investigations and positive in their facts and law."

The scale of fees is small compared with what could be charged, it says, but there is a problem with the high ratio of inexperienced "student types" among lawyers on legal aid cases. The letter is signed by 12 prisoners at Brandon Correctional Institute.

NFU Pacified

MANNING, Alta. (CP) — The National Farmers' Union called off proposed picketing of the Great Slave Lake Railway Tuesday when 16 grain cars arrived at this town, 130 miles north of Grande Prairie.

The NFU said last week that if the railway continued to send large numbers of ore cars up the line while few grain cars were received, they would stop rail movement Tuesday by picketing.

Grain was rotting in piles in fields while the railway continued to ship non-perishable ore, the NFU said.

Censorship Minor

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta cabinet minister had a brief reply Tuesday for an opposition member who wanted to know if a previously-tabled report on film censorship could be debated in the legislature.

"A typical example of the priorities that the government of Alberta should have is the energy crisis that exists in this world," said Horst Schmidt, minister of culture, youth and recreation.

"I think it is much more important than censorship," he told Richard Gruenwald (SC—Lethbridge West).

DOCTORS UNAWARE OF DRUG CONTENTS

MONTREAL (CP) — A study of the prescribing habits of 60 doctors in Montreal has shown "serious gaps in their exact knowledge of the contents of the drug preparations they order for their patients," says Dr. Pierre Biron, a specialist in drugs on the medical faculty of the University of Montreal.

"If this pilot survey ... were representative ... the inescapable conclusions would be that in the majority of instances when a physician signs his name below a drug-combination prescription, he does not know exactly what he is signing for," he said in a recent issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal, a magazine for doctors.

When patients receive a prescription, they assume their doctor knows what he is ordering, Biron said. His sample questionnaire, sent to 60 doctors chosen because they were easily reached and would take part, indicates this is not so.

Because of these findings, a larger survey is being done with selected doctors representing a more accurate cross-section of the profession, he said.

"We hope that this larger-scale, more representative survey will invalidate the conclusions we have drawn in this preliminary report and show physicians do know exactly what they prescribe."

In the preliminary survey, doctors were asked to name three drug combinations — preparations containing more than one ingredient — that they had prescribed in the last year. Then they were asked how many active ingredients were in the drug and what these were.

Of the 23 drugs — most of them common ones — mentioned by the doctors, in only four instances did 50 per cent or more of the doctors identify the ingredients correctly.

CUTE KITTIES don't have much to look forward to in Greater Victoria where 1,376 cats were destroyed in 1972 because their owners failed to retrieve them from the SPCA pound. Of 1,652 cats picked up, 131 were claimed and 145 found new homes. Cuteness disappears, and so does interest in feeding — and spaying or neutering to keep kitty from wandering is just a costly bother. Traffic also takes its toll on felines.

There's Room to Help Man's Best Friend

But when you also have a pet animal and it takes sick and you have to pay veterinary bills, it is the kind of expense over and above day-to-day necessities that sometimes is just too much to bear.

That's when the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals steps in with help.

SPCA Victoria branch manager Dave Beeching has a sheaf of examples of how the society has helped those in need.

A lady with a 19-year-old cat — "a real good age for a cat" — had a $26 bill for stitches for her injured pet paid by the SPCA. She was in financial difficulties.

Another lady, on welfare, had a small dog which needed speying. The lady also had to go to hospital. The SPCA paid for the speying.

In cases like these, the SPCA has paid anywhere from $10 to $35 "for people who need assistance," often for their only companion — a pet dog or cat.

Your dollars contributed to United Way help in providing this assistance to the needy, and to educational programs arranged by the SPCA.

Other activities of the SPCA are paid for by voluntary contributions outside the United Way and pound fees in contract arrangements with Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

The SPCA received $750 from the United Way in 1973.

Discussing the general activities of the SPCA, Beeching quickly reviewed some recent correspondence, including a letter from Michigan State regarding zoos, the Alberta wildlife branch about humane trapping, a letter to a distraught lady over the death of her dog, a letter to a supporter about a B.C. SPCA brief on abandoned horses, the seizing and release of four Great Danes on Saturna Island and a "lengthy" letter to Victoria city regarding animal control.

Beeching said everyone seems to know about stray dogs, but most people don't know that there are almost twice as many stray cats.

Figures for 1972 show 990 dogs were impounded — and 1,652 cats. Owners claimed 458 dogs and new homes were found for 72 but owners claimed only 131 cats while 145 found new homes.

The unclaimed and unwanted animals have to be destroyed. "There is no other way," said Beeching.

Established Women's Groups Meet Challenge of Priorities

elizabeth forbes

Are long-established women's organizations in Canada fighting for existence today? Are they gradually being nudged aside by newer and less highly organized groups that work with persistence and uncompromising zeal, without the restraints imposed by historical and constitutional bonds?

These questions and others like them, are being asked all across the country and they are bringing forth some serious and concerned ideas.

Amongst the most thought provoking were expressed by Mrs. Gwendolyn Black, retiring president of the Canadian Federation of University Women, in a talk at its 19th triennial conference held in Ottawa in August.

Mrs. Black was speaking, of course, to members of her own federation. However, her ideas are equally important and equally applicable to every long-established women's organization in Canada.

Most women (in such organizations) have "a highly developed sense of priorities," she said, "but we are easily distracted and we labor under some difficulties.

"We find ourselves in an era of women's liberation, not yet ready to accept the role as it is fashioned by our younger and more militant sisters; we find ourselves in an age of equality of opportunity, not yet ready to understand either equality or opportunity; we find ourselves in a time of doubt and suspicion, not ready to trust one another."

"Moreover," she added, "although we have all been trained in some discipline, we are not ready to apply a similar measure of commitment to the responsibilities inherent in a voluntary organization."

Results can only be achieved by effort and effort must be expended by everyone, she believed, "not just one-third strength" (which is about the present level of effort in many women's organizations).

Looking briefly at her three years in office (1970-73) Mrs. Black spoke of unrest in education, ethnic problems, fear for the environment and the fact that women's status was in a twilight zone, halfway between the report and the recommendations.

"Gradually we began to see these events in the light of what could be done at the local level to avert further disaster ... and community involvement became our main concern."

Through this involvement, the retiring national president believed clubs in CFUW "are learning to survey, compare, question, analyse and broaden our preceptions and horizons ... and ultimately, we will be prepared to take action at local, provincial and national level with the speed and assurance which comes from many of us, not just a few of us, knowing what we're doing."

In the meantime, she said, CFUW (and, I would say, other long established women's groups) must take steps to move into the last quarter of the 20th century with initiative and a sense of dedicated direction "or we will be swamped by the rising tide" of the more aggressive "but not always as well balanced" groups.

These create "the fertile climate in which change and improvements can take place. Their sometimes brilliant leaders are the impressarios, and results are unlikely to be produced without their high-style publicity, controversy and consciousness-raising."

Their voices are raised not only with regard to matters affecting the status of women, they are concerned with new approaches to education, with freedoms of opinion on current issues and with new confidence in themselves.

"We would do well to listen," Mrs. Black cautions. On the other had she reminds us that our present society is sensitive to the requests of organizations like CFUW and is expectant of reasoned demands from them.

Therefore, these new groups "will change neither laws nor attitudes without the steady pressures of those who undertake the more sober techniques of responsible action."

This is the role, of course, that all long-established and responsible women's organizations are well suited by skill and inclination.

As Mrs. Black says "there is nothing wrong with our structure — it is basically sound and efficient; there is nothing wrong with our communication system — it, too, is sound and as swift as we (the individual clubs) allow it to be.

"It is the human factor which is the saboteur, and until we devise safeguards to protect us from the Ladies-Aid-syndrome, we will continue to give less than our best."

She concludes with the belief that the strength and survival of her own organization (and, certainly of other comparable organizations) "rests equally on the local clubs and on the quality of leadership at all levels, and without exception."

He's Slim At 182

Ron was born 29 years ago at Beiseker, 30 miles northeast of Calgary. But his friends say he was really born in 1972, when his friends stopped calling him Fatso after he lost 158 pounds.

"My navel never saw sunshine until '72," Ron says as he recalls his years of "never feeling like I had any bones."

He was a "chubby" youngster, a "plump" teenager and a "jolly" university student. He eventually carried 340 pounds on a five-foot-nine frame.

As an education student at the University of Alberta he was lonely.

"I'd go to class early to find a left-handed desk so it would be easier to write. I always wore a sweater and a coat — I could never button it — and would just sit there, never talking or challenging professors. I didn't wany anyone to notice the fat guy."

Socially, he developed a "fat, jolly exterior."

Peru Starts Up Car Production

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru has taken the first tentative steps to buttress its baby automotive industry by going into the production of component parts such as engines, transmission systems, axles, gears and clutches. At present, automaking is limited to assembling knockdown kits imported from abroad.

Apple Gingerbread A Halloween Treat

By HILDA BEASTALL

Homemade Apple Gingerbread is good as a special Halloween treat for the youngsters who come to your house next week. It is also easy enough to bake after lunch on Halloween to have it ready, still slightly warm for whenever you want to serve it, either with glasses of milk or hot cocoa if the night is damp and chill as befitting the Witches Eve.

While oven is heating to 400 degs., grease a glass baking dish 5x12x1½ inches, or similar capacity. This makes 12 or 15 child size servings.

Wash, pare thinly, core and slice enough apples to make a thick layer over bottom of dish. Sprinkle ¼ c. demarara sugar over apples, and juice of one lemon squeezed over the sugar.

Put uncovered into 400 deg. oven for 10 to 15 minutes. See that sugar does not burn. The apple slices should be almost tender in this time.

Gingerbread Mixture

3 Tbsp soft margarine
2 Tbsp demarara sugar
1 Tbsp blackstrap molasses
1 large egg or 2 small
1 c. buttermilk or plain yogurt
1 c. unbleached flour
½ c. wholewheat flour
¼ c. wheat germ
1 tsp brewer's yeast
1 tsp salt
1 tsp baking powder
½ tsp baking soda
1 tsp mixed ginger and nutmeg

Soften margarine in large bowl; add sugar and molasses. Mix well with wooden spoon. Add egg and beat for one minute, then add buttermilk (or yogurt) gradually, mixing in.

Measure and sift all dry ingredients, adding gradually to the margarine-buttermilk mixture until mixed, but do not beat.

By this time the apples should be ready. Take from oven and reduce heat to 350 before putting in the Gingerbread.

Spoon the batter over the apples in the dish, covering completely. Return dish to oven (now at 350 degs.) to cook for about 45 to 50 minites. Test for "doneness" with clean knife.

Best when served slightly warm.

Wheat Germ Cookies

4 Tbsp soft margarine
1 Tbsp demarara sugar
1 egg
½ c. wholewheat flour
½ tsp baking powder
¼ tsp salt
¼ c. powdered skim milk
¼ c. water
1 c. rolled oats
½ c. wheat germ
½ c. raisins

Cream margarine and sugar; add egg and beat together with wooden spoon. Sift flour with baking powder, salt, and milk powder; add to creamed mixture with the water. Stir in raisins, wheat germ and oats.

Place by small spoonfuls on greased pan and bake at 350 degs. for about 20 minutes, until lightly brown.

Anne Loses Weight

LONDON (Reuter) Princess Anne's dressmakers have been busy altering the dummy on which her wedding gown will be made — the princess has been losing weight.

The Susan Small fashion house, which is making the gown for the Nov. 14 wedding, praised their young royal customer.

"She has got into the frame of mind where everything she puts on suits her and she adores it," said company chairman David Harrington.

But, he added, the princess had unintentionally caused them a slight problem.

"Princess Anne has lost a lot of weight. We have had to have alterations made to the dummy."

The princess is down to size 10, the royal dressmakers reported. Their fitting chart showed this means a 34½-inch bust, a 25-inch waist and 35-inch hips.

A spokesman at Buckingham Palace said she did not think the slimming was the result of conscious effort by the princess. She had no official information about the loss in weight.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By WALTER ALVAREZ

I read in a release from the American Podiatry Association that recent studies indicate that a person's chances of getting athlete's foot from another person, perhaps by walking barefoot at a public pool or in a gymnasium shower room, are slim.

Dr. Jerome Shapiro, who has made a special study of this problem, believes that many people feel hesitant about using motel or hotel showers, even though athlete's foot fungi are rarely transferred from one person to another in this manner.

Shapiro tested a group of volunteers, who deliberately exposed themselves to the athlete's-foot-producing fungi for 30 minutes, in much larger amounts than most people would ever be exposed to under normal conditions — and none of the volunteers became infected.

In fact, all of us are exposed to the fungi almost all of the time, because they are present on everyone's feet, and the fungi multiply when conditions of warmth and moisture lower skin resistance to infection. Obviously, the big thing for swimmers and other athletes to do is always to carefully clean and dry the area between the toes.

Shapiro also recommends a fungicidal powder to keep the feet as dry as possible.

As a boy in Hawaii, swimming every day, I had much trouble with athlete's foot; later I discovered that if I carefully dried the spaces between my toes, I had no more trouble.

I also learned that if I felt a burning sensation between two toes and saw streak of red, inflamed skin, all I had to do was apply some carbolized vaseline and that was the end of the trouble. Today there are drugs which are very effective in getting rid of the mold.

COMPULSIVE EATING

I often read of the good work being done at the Long Island Jewish Hillside Medical Centre (in New Hyde Park, N.Y.). One of the most interesting bits of news to come from them is that a psychiatrist there, Dr. Richard Green, has found that a number of compulsive eaters have abnormal electroencephalograms (EEGs), which are records of the tiny electric currents constantly running through the brain. These people can get relief from their frantic desire for food by taking the splendid anticonvulsive drug, Dilantin.

Green noticed that one of his patients, who was a compulsive eater, also had periodic outbursts of rage which are frequently seen in people with abnormal EEGs. When he gave the patient Dilantin to stop the rage outbursts, he found that the compulsion to eat was also controlled.

He therefore studied the EEGs of other compulsive eaters and found that their brain wave patterns were also abnormal. When they were given the drug, they also got relief from their compulsion to eat voraciously.

Green says that these people are different from the usual obese people who are fat simply because they eat too much continually.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with romantic inclinations and creative endeavors. Young person returns a favor. You have chance for beneficial changes. What seemed out-of-reach becomes available.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New outlook regarding home, security, family is featured. You retreat a few steps but you also make significant advances. Family member is willing to see things your way. Be a gracious "winner."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Some appointments may be missed because of timing error. You would be wise to double check. Pisces individual could play significant role. See situation as it is, not merely as you would like it to be. You could be trying to do too much at once.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent is on money, responsibility and achievement. Review Leo message. Deal with older, experienced individual. Avoid temptation to take what looks like a shortcut. Select quality. Be thorough. Collect and pay debts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lunar cycle is tops — take a chance on yourself. Trust judgment, hunch. Make new start. Strive to imprint your own style. Be independent in thought, action. Highlight originality. Be ready for compliments from opposite sex.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What you thought was settled may be revived in behind-scenes meeting. Clandestine affairs are brought to light. If you want to put head in sand, you temporarily delay showdown. Key is to understand in mature manner. Don't cast first stone. But do face issues.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on romantic interests, creative pursuits, satisfaction to be gained through professional activity. Cancer individual might figure prominently. Avoid any tendency to look back, to brood, to wonder about "if only" or "what might have been." Those are sledgehammer words!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spotlight is on where you want to go, how far you are prepared to travel, how much effort you intend to put forth. Don't promise more than can be delivered. One you care for is watching, observing and will pass judgment.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may be studying a new subject. You could even be speaking a different language. You will be changing your routine. Your views will be sought. Time for writing, for making long-distance contacts, connections. Broaden horizons.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, somewhat of a perfectionist. You have tendency to brood. You draw to you many born under Virgo, Pisces. You are due to earn more but you also will have added financial responsibilities. If single, marriage is on horizon. Dynamic young person will soon bring pleasure.

By HARRIET HART

Today is United Nation's Day! What better time to recall some of the outstanding achievements of a former Secretary of State for External Affairs and Canadian Prime Minister who for so long headed the Canadian delegation to this international organization, Mike Pearson.

The illustrated 8-page folder "Mike" was written by J. King Gordon, member of the National Executive of the United Nations Association.

Although 'Mike' is no longer with us, we benefit from the fruits of his endeavours. It was Pearson who initiated the commission on bilingualism and biculturalism; it was Pearson who started the work on constitutional reform in cooperation with the provinces. Thanks to Pearson we now enjoy the benefits of a Canada Pension Plan and of Medicare. And without Pearson, we might still be without a distinctive national flag.

After retiring from politics, Pearson did not rest on his laurels. He accepted the chairmanship of the board of the International Development Research Centre, a professorship at Ottawa's Carleton University, and he became a member of the Atlantic Council. Finally, he took time out to pen his memoirs, but did not have the chance to complete them.

The folder also tells about the many successful efforts Pearson made to further international peace and understanding, particularly in the Korean and Suez crisis. These and similar endeavours eventually earned him the Nobel Peace Prize.

Removal of the Entire Breast 'Most Effective Cancer Curb'

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Cancer Society has warned that any surgical treatments of breast cancer that remove less than the entire breast have not been scientifically proved to be as effective as total removal.

Controversy has arisen over the surgical treatment of breast cancer, the cancer society said in its annual publication, '74 Cancer Facts and Figures.

"A spate of articles in lay publications, mostly women's magazines with wide circulation, has stressed the right and privilege of patients to decide which treatment should be used," the society reported. "Focus has been on the question—to have a mastectomy or not."

In some cases the removal of the entire breast has been approached with emotionalism, the society said.

It said: "The American Cancer Society believes that the public should not be misled into accepting limited procedures that are less fully proven than mastectomy."

There are various forms of mastectomy, depending on whether and to what degree underlying chest muscles, lymph nodes in the armpit or in the internal mammary chain of lymph nodes are removed along with the entire breast.

The limited procedures have a variety of names, including lumpectomy, local excision, partial mastectomy and tylectomy. In each instance, the tumor mass is removed with a varying amount of surrounding tissue, the cancer society said.

The society said: "The proven methods of therapy are highly effective—85-90 per cent survivals at five years—when diagnosis and treatment are achieved at an early stage."

About 95 per cent of patients, however, discover their cancers themselves by breast self-examination. Sixty per cent of these patients have cancers that have already spread to the lymph nodes in the armpit, a stage where the five-year survival rate is only 40 to 45 per cent.

The cancer society and the National Cancer Institute are sponsoring some 20 demon*stration projects aimed at* early detection.

Curds, Whey Not on the Menu

OTTAWA (CP) — Little Miss Muffet's nursery-rhyme meal of curds and whey may have been a staple in her day but it has made no recent appearances on North American menus.

In fact, whey has been a disposal headache for the dairy industry. The greenish-yellow fluid residue of cheese-making has been used as fertilizer, fed to swine and dumped into sewers and rivers, where it's a major pollutant.

But scientists at Silverwood Industries Ltd. in London, Ont., say protein-deficient snack foods such as potato chips and soft drinks may soon be fortified with an inexpensive protein derived from whey, Science Dimension magazine reports in a recent issue.

Following a five-year research program financed in part by a $230,000 National Research Council grant, the dairy company has developed a method of clarifying, filtering and drying whey that produces a protein concentrate.

The concentrate could be used in snack foods, as well as animal foods, meringue toppings, bread, cakes, ice cream and cheese dips. Another process yields lactose drink bases suitable for use in carbonated and alcoholic beverages.

Having completed basic research, the company says more study is required to determine the best commercial application for its whey products.

Nighttime Uniform

DEAR ABBY: I am a male, age 52, married for 30 years, and I am still very much alive in every respect.

For several years now, my wife, who is a very attractive woman, has come to bed fully clothed in her uniform of pajamas which are buttoned high up around her neck and tightly secured at the waist, the wrists, and ankles. There is just no getting in anywhere.

She also has yards of toilet tissue wrapped around her head to keep her hairdo intact, and the whole paper-head is covered with a ridiculous ruffled nightcap.

I wish she would get one of those lovely nightgowns I have given her out of the drawer and wear it, so I could tell I was sleeping with a woman. I just can't 'stand those pajamas and that helmet!

Does any other man feel the way I do ? I hope to see your answer before the fire goes out. — Anti P.J.'s.

DEAR ANTI: Yes, most of them do. Women, what are you saving your lovely, feminine nightgowns and hairdos for? It's later than you think.

A woman who goes to bed looking like a scarecrow reminds me of the bride who came to her own wedding in rollers — because she wanted to look nice for the reception.

DEAR ABBY: We are 10 mothers writing this letter because we all have the same problem. We don't know what the laws are pertaining to students' rights. Here are a few of our complaints:

1. If a teacher can't control the class, she marks everybody zero or "E" for the day.

2. If a student loses his money (or if it is stolen) he isn't allowed to use the phone to cal lhome so someone can either bring him lunch money or lunch.

3. Do teachers (or principals) have the right to whip a kid without his parents' permission? (They do in this school.)

4. One child stayed out of school for religious reasons and in order to embarrass him the teacher asked the child to stand in front of the class and say a prayer. — Mothers.

DEAR MOTHERS: You seem to have some legitimate complaints. Go to school and have a talk with the teacher and the principal. If you do not get satisfactory answers, appeal to the superintendent of shcools. And as a last resort, there is always the board of education.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self - addressed envelope, please.

Gamblers Anonymous Moves Into Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Bill collectors at the door, a husband's long unexplained absence from home, broken promises to stop gambling — a group of gamblers' wives share their common problems each week at meetings in a Toronto church.

Members of Gam-Anon, one of several loosely-knit organizations in North America that started in California 15 years ago, they meet to offer mutual advice and support.

"My husband would bet on a drop of rain tomorrow," said one wife. "He knows he cannot buy even one lottery ticket, make one $2 horse-race bet."

"Gamblers Anonymous members know they have to keep attending meetings week after week, year after year," she says. "Just as we wives, mothers and young people do."

Her husband, she said, had gone for years, then slipped and was back. Now he's OK again.

The group estimates that among those who spend more than $50 billion gambling in Canada and the United States each year, more than six million are compulsive gamblers.

Members are known to each other only by their first names and programs roughly parallel sessions for members of Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon, families of alcoholics.

The first step in the 12-step program set down for wives, is to admit powerlessness over the problem.

No one can make a compulsive gambler stop gambling but himself, the women are told, and efforts to shield the gambler and raise money for debts are futile.

"The weight of the world went off my back when I accepted this," said Irene.

All are aware that the gambling habit, while it can be held in check, cannot be cured.

Priests Rap PQ Terrorist Tag

QUEBEC (CP)—Thirty-one priests have released a statement here criticizing politicians and other groups who, they say, have been calling the Parti Quebecois program "Communist" or "terrorist" during the current provincial election campaign.

"We assert that we have found nothing in the program which merits these accusations," the priests say.

The statement also criticizes "certain parties" for trying to create a climate of fear during the campaign which ends Oct. 29.

In an interview, three priests acting as spokesmen alleged that Jean-Noel Tremblay, a Union Nationale member of the national assembly and former minister, said that PQ supporters have blood on their hands.

They said Tremblay has said the PQ is offering a "Quebec with a touch of Chile sauce," and criticized "the statements of Yvon Dupuis according to which PQ supporters are terrorists, etc."

Abbe Armand Therrien, one of the spokesmen and president of the Parti Quebecois association in Portneuf County, said their statement should not be considered formal support for the Parti Quebecois.

He said a majority of the 31 priests would not sign a public statement endorsing the PQ.

In Ottawa, Real Caouette, national Social Credit leader, accused the priests of acting in a disgusting manner by defending the Parti Quebecois program from criticism by Dupuis and other Quebec politicians.

In a news release, Caouette called the group "some little priests who are more pequistes (PQ supporters) and socialists than Catholics and Christians."

He said the priests had acted in a "disgusting and shocking manner by cloaking the separatist and socialist policies of the PQ in their white surplices."

Caouette singled out Abbe Gilles Marquis, one of the priests' spokesmen, and said that he "speaks like a Marxist when he asserts that the present capitalist regime only maintains a disadvantaged class, and when he pretends that only the PQ is now attacking the foundations of capitalism."

He said it is his opinion that "these priests should be working to restabilize the Christian doctrine instead of acting as defenders and propagandists for a political movement which has the support of a whole litany of Marxists, socialists, felquistes (FLQ supporters) and revolutionaries of the same kind."

PAPER ALTERNATIVE EYED

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — University of Florida researchers are experimenting with a fast-growing plant which looks like marijuana, is inexpensive and may provide a solution to the newsprint shortage in the United States.

"Kenaf could be the biggest thing since we learned how to make paper from pine trees," Mr. Gordon Killinger, assistant chairman of the university's agronomy department, said Tuesday.

"Kenaf resembles marijuana, although it's actually a hibiscus similar to the ones that grow so well in south Florida," said Killinger. "It's native to Africa and Asia and we're importing our seeds from Guatemala and El Salvador."

The crop coudd produce five to seven times more pulp a year than conventional pine forests, Killinger said. "One of the unusual things is that the crop could be harvested annually, whereas pine trees usually require over 15 years.

"This could definitely end the newsprint shortage," Killinger said. "Some company will have to start producing paper from kenaf and then it should be on the road."

Killinger said that two factors are limiting the development of kenaf growing in the U.S. There are a shortage of seeds and a Florida regulation that bans it because the plant is a host for pink bollworm, which damages cotton.

The plant has been grown at the university since 1957.

Shield Bill Fails

OTTAWA (CP) — A private members bill designed to protect a journalist from being forced to disclose his information soucres got nowhere in the Commons Tuesday.

No vote was taken on the bill, proposed by Arnold Peters (NDP — Timiskaming), during the hour set aside for private members business.

It now goes to the bottom of the pile of private bills and probably will not be revived during this session.

Peters criticized the press for not duplicating the investigative reporting of the United States press which had uncovered considerable wrongdoing, including the Watergate scandal.

He said journalists must be assured they will not have to disclose their information sources and the sources must know they are safe from disclosure.

He was opposed by four Liberals, all of whom said the bill would do more harm than good to the press.

Peters said reporters in Canada are not charged by their employers with doing more than reporting superficial news. They were not charged with discovering developments and developing sources.

If Canada had the kind of reporter there is in the U.S., there would be an investigation into the dismissal of Canadian National Railway auditors by the government and the fact that they have not been replaced. He said the dismissal never has been explained in the Commons or in the news.

He also said, erroneously, there have been no reports from Canadians from the battlefields of the Middle East.

He was opposed by Liberals James Fleming (York West), a former radio reporter, Denis Ethier (Glengarry — Prescott-Russell), Romeo LeBlanc (Westmoreland-Kent), a former press secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, and Rod Blaker (Lachine), a one-time broadcaster.

Grocers Blast Expiry Tags

TORONTO (CP) — The proposed labelling of perishable foods, indicating their expiry date, was criticized Tuesday at the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Retail Grocers.

H. W. Wagner, of the federal department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, told delegates to expect government regulations requiring such labels on foods that have a shelf life of less than 90 days.

However, some delegates disagreed with his statement that the government "is committed to a program of more informative labelling."

William Hill, newly-elected president of the group and president of Lakeside Marketeria Ltd. of Oakville, Ont., said a policx of "goods satisfactory or money refunded" covers all cases of consumer dissatisfaction.

Inclusion of an expiry date will "just involve another cost and another piece of government machinery that will add to my taxes," he said.

Another delegate said that if complaints about food quality are so numerous, health officials should be regulating the products.

But Wagner countered: "When you have to rely on your health authority to judge meat, then all is not well in marketplace."

New Ark Probe Urged

TORONTO (CP) — On the side of a mountain peak that rises 17,000 feet above the frontier between Turkey and Soviet Armenia there are ancient timbers made from an unknown, man-made structure.

Some people, including their discoverer, Fernand Navarra, a French demolition expert, believe them to be part of the skeleton of a huge, 5,000-year-old ship—Noah's Ark.

Ararat, the highest in a cluster of peaks referred to as the Mountains of Ararat, has been considered the site of the ark for centuries by the neighboring peoples.

Prof. R. K. Harrison, who teaches Old Testament in the Toronto School of Theology and is the author of numerous books and articles, said:

"There is obviously an artifact of some kind on Ararat at the 14,000-foot level. How did it get there and when? Personally, I believe it possible that the ark is there. I see the Genesis stories as ancient history writing and not as myths."

DISMISSES BIBLE

On the other hand, Prof. John S. Halladay Jr. of the department of Near Eastern studies at University of Toronto, is completely sceptical:

"What you have in the Genesis story of the flood is myth and not fact. It is common in a number of ancient traditions, some of them older than the account of Genesis, for example, in the Gilgamesh epic."

Navarra's find set off a furore both in scientific and religious circles. Although scarcely a summer has gone by since 1955, when Navarra found the remnants of the ship, without one or more attempts to follow Navarra's lead, most investigators have been amateurs with little hope of discovering anything.

One exception has been a United States-based foundation with two Canadians on its board of directors. In 1969, with Navarra as guide and assisted by Ralph Lenton, chief logistics officer for the Arctic Institute of North America, they returned to the 1955 location.

FOUND PLANKS

They found several pieces of the planking—one 18 inches long, four inches wide and an inch thick. Although the wood was found to be 1,400 years old, it was not old enough to be part of the ark.

Mr. Lenton, 50, is a polar explorer with 25 years experience. He has lived in the Antarctic for eight years and was deputy-leader of the Commonwealth Trans-Antarctic exploration from 1955 to 1958.

Mr. Lenton said in an interview: "I'm not an extreme fundamentalist, but I do believe in the Bible. Archeology so far has upheld biblical truth. In my view, there was a Noah's ark that came to rest on Mount Ararat.

"One early account says the ark used to be lower down the mountain but that it was taken up and rebuilt near the peak as a shrine during the time of plague about 400 AD. The planks we found in 1969 could have been part of the newer wood used at that juncture."

It's Already The Tallest

TORONTO (CP) — The tallest, self-supporting structure in the world is going up in downtown Toronto at a rate of 22 feet a day.

When finished, the CN Tower, will be 1,805 feet high — 57 feet taller than the Ostankino Tower in Moscow, now the highest structure in the world.

By the start of this week the tower had reached 1,070 feet — already higher than any other building in Canada.

Started Feb. 6 of this year, the tower will be 1,500 feet high by mid-December when the concrete pour is finished.

When the needle-shaped transmission mast — for most of the city's radio and television stations — is installed, the structure will hit the 1,805-foot mark.

Workers and officials of Canadian National Railways involved in the project near the Toronto waterfront stress the tower isn't going to be the tallest in the world just for the sake of setting a record.

Its height will produce the best possible results for radio and television transmission, and the record will be only a coincidence.

A restaurant to be built at the 1,110-foot level will have a view of 75 miles in all directions.

Library May Miss Handout

The Greater Victoria Public Library may miss out on substantial financial assistance from the provincial government if it doesn't meet government requirements on regionalization.

Brian Tobin told the library board Tuesday that under the government's library development program funds representing 20 per cent of operating costs would be available to recognized library systems and large amounts of money granted for establishment of new branches.

He told the board, however, that for a library system to be recognized, plans for the system must be approved by the Library Development Commission before it can be a viable entity under the Public Libraries Act.

The board has applied to the Capital Regional District board, urging that the library system be regionalized.

The board agreed Tuesday that library director Donald Miller should get the exact procedure for becoming recognized under the act from the LDC.

The LDC's program for the Capital Regional District could eventually extend the scope of the GVPL's service to reach Port Renfrew, Saanich Peninsula and parts of the Gulf Islands.

The library board has applied for regionalization of the four core municipalities and Central Saanich.

In a five-year program announced by the provincial government, the province could eventually be served by 10 library systems.

The other system suggested for Vancouver Island would encompass the Alberni-Clayoquot, Comox-Strathcona, Cowichan Valley, Mount Waddington and the Nanaimo areas.

Concern was expressed at Tuesday's board meeting that North Saanich, Sidney and other areas not now in the library system should not feel that they were being forced to join.

"I hope that neither we (the board), dollars nor the provincial government would force them into this system," Saanich Ald. Alan Newberry said.

"The first step is that the present system become a function of the Capital Regional District," replied Miller.

He said discussions he had with members of the LDC didn't indicate that any pressure would be brought to bear on areas not now in the system.

"There is no indication of coercion here," he said, "... except, maybe in the matter of dollars.

"We don't have to have 100 per cent of a region right away. If they (areas in the regional district not now in the library system) want to join, that's fine."

Private School Aid Predicted

Government financial support for private schools will come eventually, the headmaster of Shawnigan Lake School for Boys predicted Tuesday.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly and the NDP government is "much more" sympathetic to private schools than the Social Credit government, Hugh Wilkinson told members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly lunch meeting at The Empress.

But before any government help is forthcoming, said Wilkinson, Dailly told him private schools "have got to get support from the grassroots, because they've been unpopular."

Government support for private (or independent) schools could make them available to more than the upper income brackets, he said.

Yet the price for that support must not be government control, he added — orders telling the schools not to teach ethics or standards, to hire only B.C. Teachers' Federation members, to "watch our disciplinary practices."

Teaching ethics and self-discipline and proper conduct is something private schools give which public schools do not, Wilkinson said.

Dailly believes ethics and discipline are the job of the family, not the school, he said, and that "schools should be merely a place of opportunity."

In today's world that is folly, Wilkinson said.

"We no longer live the kind of lives that sustain the family as the centre of standards of behavior and good discipline."

Now, teaching of ethics and morality is neglected by both teachers and parents.

"Discipline, direction, compulsion and high standards" are key words of private schools.

He disputed the popular idea students should be given considerable freedom to choose what subjects and areas they want to study.

Many students don't have the high motivation needed to make that system work, Wilkinson said.

At Shawnigan boys are told they must take part in sports, he said, and some boys who would never voluntarily take part turn out to be fair players.

MICHENERS INVITED

OTTAWA (CP) — Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener and Mrs. Michener will attend the wedding ceremony for Princess Anne and cavalryman Mark Phillips in Westminster Abbey on Nov. 14. A Government House spokesman said Tuesday night that Mr. Michener has received an invitation to the wedding "and is going." He said the Micheners would leave a few days before the wedding and would remain in England "a good part of the next week."

Turner Predicts Growth in '74

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Finance Minister John Turner forecast in the Commons Tuesday that Canada should experience a "strong rate of growth" in 1974 as well as this year.

Members of the cabinet were questioned in the House about the state of the economy, inflationary pressures and unemployment.

James Gillies (PC—Don Valley) the official opposition's financial critic claimed that it was clear that in the second quarter, and probably in the third quarter, the economy is not expanding. He said unemployment was rising and attributed both developments to high interest rates.

"What is the government going to do about it?" he demanded.

"The economy is still growing at the rate predicted by the government and rejected by the opposition February. The real rate of growth of seven per cent across the country shows that the economy is at capacity or near capacity," said Turner.

With regard to mortgages, Turner said Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford was attending a trilevel conference in Edmonton. He said he would refer the question on mortgages and interest rates to his colleague.

The minister rejected arguments from the opposition that the high interest rates were bringing about a slowdown in the growth of the economy.

"There is no evidence that the high interest rate either is contributing to the slowdown in economy or is geared to slowing down the economy.

"It moderrates the expansion of the economy in two ways. First of all to respond to the extremely strong demands for credit to accommodate that expansion and secondly, to reflect the international interest rate structure," said Turner.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Turner if he could offer any new interpretation of the September seasonally-adjusted jobless rate of 6.6 per cent.

Turner said he stood by the explanation he offered previously—that the economy is operating at or near full capacity and that shortages of materials and equipment are the main problems.

Stanfield then pulled out finance department statistics released Monday that showed an increase of 21 per cent in the last three months in the number of help-wanted advertisements appearing in daily newspapers.

He asked if the minister found evidence of disincentives to work being responsible for shortages of labor.

Turner said he was still awaiting a report of the Economic Council of Canada on the state of the economy.

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) asked Manpower Minister Robert Andres if he could explain the figures in the light of the September jobless rate, up from 5.5 per cent in August.

Andres said the jobless rate "does not represent one monolithic unemployment problem but several."

The government was exploring the idea of setting up more job information centres and job banks in federal manpower centres, following a four-day series of talks with provincial government and manpower officials, he said.

James McGrath (PC—St. John's East) asked Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray if he could explain regional disparities in recent living cost increases — 1.4 per cent in Thunder Bay, Ont., compared with four-tenths of one per cent in Ottawa, Gray said he is taking an interest in the entire problem of rising living costs.

UIC Payouts Decline Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Total unemployment insurance payments dropped in August to $145 million, down $10.5 million from July and $9 million below August, 1972, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

It was the third month this year in which the jobless pay total fell below levels of the corresponding months last year. The other two months were May and June.

In August, payments in all provinces and territories except Quebec were lower than in July.

The August report gave these figures for the provinces featured in the August report:

British Columbia — Total $18.2 million, down $1.9 million for the month and down $1 million over the year. Average benefit $74.58, up $2.41 for the month and up $7.88 over the year.

Alberta — Total $6.3 million, down $280,000 for the month and $2.6 million below a year earlier. Average benefit $71.77, down 64 cents below a year earlier. Average benefit $71.77, down 64 cents for the month and up $6.89 over the year.

Saskatchewan — Total $2.8 million, down $240,000 for the month and down $435,000 over the year. Average benefit $66.08, down 94 cents from July and up $6.08 from August, 1972.

Manitoba — Total $4 million, down $194,000 for the month and $676,000 below August, 1972. Average benefit $67.53, down 84 cents from July and up $12.12 over August, 1972.

Ontario — Total $40.8 million, down $6.4 million from July and $10.1 million less than August, 1972. Average benefit $67.42, down $2.03 from July and up $5.74 over the year.

Quebec — Total $47.2 million, up $1.8 million for the month and $4.3 million above August, 1972. Average benefit $66.53, down $1.54 over the month and up $6.69 over the year.

Vet Hospital Freeze Denied

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government is continuing its policy to negotiate the transfer of veterans hospitals to provincial governments, Veterans Affairs Minister Daniel MacDonald told the Commons Tuesday.

He rejected suggestions made in the House by Allan B. McKinnon (PC-Victoria) that the retireement of Dr. K. S. Ritchie, assistant deputy minister for hospitals in the department, would slow down or "freeze" the transfer of the vet hospitals to other jurisdictions.

The minister said efforts to bring about the transfer of all veterans hospitals still under the administration of Ottawa would be continued. It was a policy of the federal government and it had not been changed.

He said Dr. Ritchie's decision to retire at 63 years of age, two years ahead of his normal retirement age, was not a "sudden decision." It was due to personal reasons.

Dr. Ritchie is chairman of the government task force to negotiate the transfer of veterans hospitals to provincial governments.

McKinnon said he had inferred from Dr. Ritchie's decision to retire that there would be a "slowdown" or a "freeze" in the transfer of veterans' hospitals.

Since the federal government adopted its policy three veterans' hospitals have been transferred. They are Lancaster in St. John, New Brunswick; Ste. Foy in Quebec City and Sunnybrook at Toronto.

The federal department of veterans' affairs continues to operate veterans' hospitals in the following centres:

Victoria — the Victoria Veterans' Hospital; Vancouver — Shaughnessy Hospital; Calgary — Col. Belcher Hospital; Winnipeg — Deer Lodge Hospital; London — Westminster Hospital; Dorval — Ste. Anne de Bellevue; Montreal — Queen Mary Hospital, and in Halifax the Camp Hill Veterans' Hospitaal.

The federal government is hoping to eventually negotiate with each province for the transfer of the eight remaining federal veterans' hospitals to the jurisdiction of the province in which it is located. However it has proved to be a slow process.

Council Says No To Body Politic

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ontario Press Council refused to hear a complaint of discrimination put forward by a Toronto homosexual periodical and has rejected a complaint by a citizen over an alleged inaccurate and misleading newspaper story.

The council said it had decided against hearing a complaint by the periodical Body Politic over a refusal by the Windsor Star to publish a classified advertisement for the magazine.

The council upheld a similar complaint by Body Politic against the Toronto Star last April and said the latest decision followed a general policy that identical complaints not be heard if an adjudication has already been issued.

Since the April decision, the ad had been submitted to some of the other eight newspapers that set up the voluntary council last year.

Some printed the ad.

The council also rejected a complaint by Bert Stollard of Toronto against a Toronto Star story Sept. 5, 1972, about affairs in the borough of York.

Without giving details, the council said "stollard did not substantiate his accusation of inaccuracy and misrepresentation in the story."

The Star argued the reporting was accurate. Stollard's dispute was with borough officials quoted in the story and not the newspaper.

Other newspaper members of the council include the Ottawa Citizen, Hamilton Spectator, Brantford Expositor, Kitchener-Waterloo Record, London Free Press, and Owen Sound Sun-Times. Together, they have more than half of the province's daily newspaper circulation.

One Girl's Prints Gem-Like

By JEREMY BOULTBEE

One of the smaller art shows to be seen in recent months in Victoria, but certainly one of the most pleasing, is Gwen Curry's small assembly of prints at The Backroom Gallery on Oak Bay Avenue.

A dedicated and meticulous worker, this represents Curry's debut in terms of "one-girl shows," although she has been on and in the local scene for several years.

Her etchings are small, gem-like, clean-cut, polished. She has chosen subjects like the moon, or simple landscapes, or so-called "nightscapes," and comes across with a somewhat fairy or fey quality that is captivating.

In her early 20s, Curry is a final-year student in the faculty of fine arts at University of Victoria.

Like many of her contemporaries, she has been studying under Pat Martin Bates in the visual arts department — which of itself should be considered no small qualification, or statement of ability.

Also like many of her peers, her work is indicative of the enormous amount of high-quality material being produced these days by serious art students in the Victoria area. The woods that surround this sleepy town are fairly crammed with artistic talent that all too often receives little or no attention from a generally unaware public.

Curry is among the best of them to come forward so far. She and the others deserve prompt recognition now — for there can be no doubt that it will come (in that never-never time "one of these days") — and right now is when it is most needed.

CRICKET ACT CRIMPED

Crickets are generally regarded as cheerful, chirpy creatures that leap about with alacrity.

Which is why Bastion

Theatre's second children's show of the season, Pinocchio, has been set back a week from its scheduled opening at McPherson Playhouse on Saturday.

Bastion's cricket — actress Ramona McBean — is not quite up to the role.

She broke her ankle.

However, Mrs. McBean is confident she will have overcome the difficulty sufficiently for the show to open Nov. 3 at 2 p.m.

The musical adaptation of the popular tale by Victoria's Marge Adelberg will then continue to run Saturdays through Nov. 24 at the same time.

And about the birthday parties that are part of Bastion's children's theatre. Don't worry, those born on Oct. 27.

Free ice cream to celebrate your day too will be on hand for the Nov. 3 opening.

Anti-Male Bias Next Court Target

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Supreme Court, which of late has interested itself in women's rights, has finally turned its attention to discrimination against men.

On Tuesday the court granted a hearing to a Miami widower, Mel Kahn, who is challenging part of Florida's tax law. The statute grants a $500 property tax exemption to widows but not widowers.

Kahn contended he was denied the benefit of the law solely because he is a man. The case will be heard in the high court in the next few months.

At the same time the court turned back to a lower court the case of two married women who charged sex discrimination in hiring against the Edwin L. Wiegand Co. in Pittsburgh.

An Early and Quiet Exit Again Made by Swallows

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO (UPI) — The going is never as dramatic as the coming, and this year the departure of hundreds of swallows from Capistrano went virtually unnoticed as usual.

Contrasting with the massive arrival of the birds each year March 19, when hundreds of birds flutter into town amid the awe of thousands of admiring tourists, the swallows made an early and quiet exit south.

No one can offer an explanation for the birds' early leave taking, except the old-timers.

They say the birds left Capistrano about three weeks ahead of schedule this year, as they did the year before and the year before that, because of an expected cold winter.

The birds usually fly south on Oct. 23.

But Floyd Nieblas, manager of The Mission, one of the many places in Capistrano where the birds land and build their nests, offered another explanation.

He said the birds may have been driven away because of man's intrusion on their natural habitat.

Gone are the orange groves and river beds where the swallows used to find materials to build their nests and water to drink, he said.

A Hobby That Got Out of Hand

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Insp. Norm Brisbin has flown through rainstorms, thunderstorms and once wasn't even stopped by a hurricane.

After 16 years with the RCMP Air Division, the weather doesn't really bother him.

Watching from the window of the Prince Albert airport canteen as rain fell on his RCMP twin Otter, he said: "If you think this is rain, well, this is nothing.

"When I flew through the tail end of Hurricane Audrey in Ontario, the stuff really came down.

"But thunderstorms, you have to watch them . . . planes have been hit by lightning, wham, and a fire starts or a hole is ripped in the plane."

The 41-year-old inspector says his flying career started as "a hobby that kind of got out of hand."

It took him from a regular detachment man's job to the air arm of the RCMP where he now heads the Edmonton detachment. The detachment is equipped with two aircraft —the new 20-seater twin Otter and an older single Otter, which a Mountie not connected with the division, described as so slow that nobody would be killed if it crashed into a mountain.

Insp. Brisbin logs about 80 hours a month—more than a commercial pilot—and says he can't get the feel of driving a car any more.

The air division, divided into sub-divisions in Ottawa and Edmonton, has 22 aircraft in 16 locations in Canada and

The Edmonton detachment formerly performed such duties as flying rations to the North, but now its main responsibilities involve such activities as prisoner transfers and searches for lost persons or criminals.

RCMP regular members who want to join the air division must obtain, on their own, a private pilot's licence and a commercial licence.

They must also have at least three years experience in regular police work. Because there is so little turnover in the air division, they usually have to wait six or seven years before there is an opening.

9% for Insurance Agents

VANCOUVER (CP) — Private insurance agents have negotiated an agreement under which they will be paid an initial nine-per-cent commission for selling compulsory British Columbia government auto insurance next year.

Under the agreement, the commission level would drop to seven per cent in the 1975-76 licence year and following that, would be subject to renegotiation.

Jack Hamilton, president of the insurance agents association of B.C., said the agreement was negotiated with the insurance corporation of B.C. but still requires cabinet approval.

Hamilton said the commission on extended coverage above the compulsory level will be 10 per cent.

He said the rates compare with commissions of 12½ to 15 per cent that agents have been receiving on sales of private auto insurance.

Hamilton said he sent a letter to all agents Tuesday advising them of the terms. He said membership meetings will be called within the next 10 days to explain them further.

He said the agents naturally wanted higher commissions than those in the agreement, but chose to accept them because there will probably be less work involved in selling the compulsory government policies.

The compulsory insurance will include $50,000 public liability coverage, $250 deductible collision coverage and $50 deductible comprehensive coverage, he said.

Hamilton said the government will also pay the agents a flat $3 fee for mid-term endorsements involving a change in premiums for compulsory or non-compulsory coverage, and a flat $1 fee for mid-term endorsements where premiums are not involved.

The first category would include such situations as a motorist trading in an older car for a new one requiring higher collision premiums. The second category might be a simple thing such as a change of address.

Hamilton said agents will not be paid for handling licence plates and new licence plate stickers, which go with the new government policies.

He said there will be no saving for members of the public to buy their policies from the motor vehicles branch rather than the agents, as the total cost of polices will be the same.

He said agents in Manitoba now are selling 85 per cent of the compulsory government policies there.

Hamilton's letter to the agents said that further matters "invoving a fee for services rendered" are still under negotiation with the insurance corporation. He declined to say at this stage what these are, but indicated they include such matters as handling accident claims.

Alberni Mill 'Near Normal'

PORT ALBERNI — Operations were reported "near normal" today at MacMillan Bloedel's pulp and newsprint mill after steam plant workers stopped booking off sick in a dispute over wage revisions.

Mill manager Bill Hawkings said the men started calling in sick at the weekend and by Tuesday afternoon only eight of 16 men were available on one shift.

Union spokesman Ken Wilson said the dispute originated some years ago when it was found certified engineers at IWA plants earned more than those in the United Paperworkers union.

It came to a head this week because "nothing has been done for so long the men decided it was about time to publicize their point and get some action on their grievances."

He said he received a telephone call from Labor Minister Bill King Tuesday night asking the union to have the men return to work. Wilson said the men agreed pending the outcome of meetings today.

CANADA JOINS GEYSER STUDY

BRUSSELS (CP) — Against the background of the western world's energy problems, Canada will actively participate in a new NATO project for studying possibly expanded use of earth resources such as hot springs and geysers for heating homes and factories.

The Canadian participation, consisting mainly of attendance at discussions of the topic by experts from NATO and other countries, is geared to the idea that the project should deal with discovery of new resources in this field — called geothermal energy — as well as in development of its uses beyond what has already been achieved in Italy, Iceland and elsewhere.

In these latter countries, geothermal resources have already proved to be what experts consider a substantial means of producing clean energy.

Major further developments are possible in a decade.

The latest project, with the United States as the co-ordinating country, won approval Tuesday at a meeting in Brussels of the NATO Committee on the Challenges of Modern Sociey.

The commitee studies a variety of non-military projects such as energy needs, pollution and civilian transportation. It makes recommendations about them to the NATO Council, which relays them to the alliance's member states for possible action.

The two-day Brussels meeting, which ends today, was attended by a delegation of Canadian experts representing the departments of energy, transport, environment and external affairs.

Geothermal potential exists on at least the eastern slopes of the Rockies as far as Canadian territory is concerned. But Canada lags behind certain other countries in developing the energy source.

Vancouver Voting On Ward System

VANCOUVER (CP) — City voters, bombarded by conflicting comments from four political groups, decide today how many aldermen they want and whether they want to retain an at-large representation or return to the ward system which they voted out 37 years ago.

Voters must choose between the current system in which they vote for all the aldermen and therefore can elect — or unseat — the entire city council at one time, a partial ward system or a full ward system. Under the partial ward system, residents vote for one alderman plus a set number of candidates-at-large.

Under the full ward system, they would just have the one aldermanic vote.

They will also decide if they want the city to buy all or part of the former Four Seasons site near Stanley Park for up to $6.4 million and whether they want to spend $2.75 million to build five new ice rinks in the city and vote to fill a vacant school board seat.

Warnett Kennedy of the Civic Non-Partisan Association has urged voters to retain the at-large system, saying those who want the ward system have a "lust for power so bad they'll butcher the city to get it."

Jack Volrich, spokesman for TEAM's aldermen in favor of the partial ward system, says the merit of the at-large system is that it allows all citizens to vote for all members of council while under the ward system, a citizen can vote for only one aldermanic representative, plus the mayor.

"Under the full ward system, the citizen is left with only one vote where now he has 10," Ald. Volrich says.

GAGLARDI RULES HIMSELF OUT

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Phil Gaglardi, the man who once came close to becoming premier of British Columbia, has taken himself out of the running for the Social Credit party's provincial leadership.

The pint-sized Pentecostal preacher said he has no plans to run for the leadership being vacated at a party convention next month by former premier W. A. C. Bennett.

In 1952, when Social Credit defeated the Liberal-Conservative coalition administration of Byron Johnson to form a minority government, the leaderless party picked Bennett over Gaglardi, who was the only other serious contender for the job.

North Cannery Plan Slammed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Spokesmen for British Columbia fish processors said Tuesday the $6 million provincial government deal with north coast Indians for a Port Simpson cannery will just switch workers and fish from other plants.

"A new cannery is not needed," said E. L. Harrison, chairman of the Fisheries Association of B.C. and executive vice-president of B.C. Packers Ltd.

"This will just take jobs and workers away from our own plants and reduce the volume of the plants."

The way to provide more work in the fishing industry is to raise more salmon so everyone's share is increased, Harrison said.

J. B. Buchanan, vice-president and general manager of B.C. Packers, said this was the position taken by the industry since the Port Simpson cannery was proposed in 1969.

Environment and Fisheries Misinster Jack Davis had rejected the porposal as uneconomic, Buchanan said.

He said the new cannery operation will have to obtain boats which are already licenced and fishing for other canneries.

RAID BAN ANNOYS

VANCOUVER (CP) — An independent Canadian union is upset at the prospect that the British Columbia labor code will be amended to ban raiding in the first year of a contract.

George Brown, regional vice-president of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers Union, said management and unions could conceivably sign one-year or 18-month agreements and effectively take away the right of B.C. workers to change unions.

Man Guilty

KELOWNA (CP) — A major combatant in the Okanagan Valley fruit war has been found guilty in provincial court of packing fruit without a licence. Allied Fruit Growers Ltd. will be sentenced Thursday.

Provincial Court Judge R. J. S. Moir found another man, Frank Snowsell, guilty of illegally selling fruit and fined him $25.

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — Janitors, maintenance men and clerical workers went on strike Tuesday against School District 34, but classes were being held as usual today for the 8,611 students. All schools in Abbotsford, Matsqui, and Sumas were affected by the walkout. The 126 employees, members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, have rejected proposed increases of about 30 per cent over the next two years and want a $1.50-an-hour over-all increase.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Work was suspended for the winter this week and 30 men were laid off at the Sukunka Creek coal deposit of Brameda Resources Ltd., it was announced Tuesday. Coalition Mining Ltd., which holds a part share in the Sukunka property, has until 1975 to exercise an option to acquire a majority holding. A spokesman for Coalition said resumption of mining will depend on talks to be held with prospective buyers.

He Never Goes Anywhere Without an Armed Guard

By FRANK N. HAWKINS JR.

His radio-equipped car is bullet-proof and his home is guarded by police with machine-guns. A Lebanese army tank, an armored car and an armored personnel carrier provide around-the-clock protection at the United States Embassy, where Buffum has his office.

Inside, hallways and rooms are under the surveillance of guards using a closed-circuit television system. Electronic door-locking devices provide added security.

Buffum, 52, is the American ambassador to Lebanon, heading the major U.S. diplomatic mission in the Middle East. He is the chief on-the-spot spokesman in the Arab world for America's pro-Israel foreign policy.

"I don't want to sound heroic," he says. "But I don't consider this a particularly risky operation. There's a risk to anything you do in life."

The danger comes in spurts.

Last December, terrorists attacked the embassy with rockets, causing extensive damage. The attack took place after office hours and so no one was injured.

SAVED BY DRIVER

In March, four Palestinian guerrillas, perhaps attempting a kidnap, drove a stolen limousine between Buffum's car and the trailing security vehicle. Embassy sources said the ambassador's driver executed a quick turn which permitted the security car to close the gap between the two vehicles.

Bomb threats against the embassy are common. Last August, a Palestinian guerrilla told a military court he planned to fire three rocket-propelled grenades at the embassy if Israeli commandos attacked Lebanon again. The guerrilla was sentenced to six months in jail.

"It's certainly more dangerous than it used to be," says one of the 175 Americans on Buffum's staff. "We have to be concerned with personal security. But I go to the golf course. I go to the beach. I don't think about it all the time."

An embassy wife says: "It's fine here. We have the Mediterranean, the mountains, a great climate, good food and the kids like it. I never feel in any danger."

GET DANGER PAY

Nevertheless, embassy personnel receive danger pay amounting to 10 per cent of their salaries. It was started in May, after fighting broke out between Lebanese troops and Palestinian guerrillas.

The U.S. government labels the extra pay as "hardship allowance," although the diplomats live in comfortable homes and enjoy a lively social life, good restaurants, vacation travel and plenty of American consumer goods.

Palestinian refugee camps are out of bounds to Americans, but embassy employees develop many friendships with Lebanese and other Arabs living in Beirut.

"We do face a problem in the Arab mind generally of being allegedly unfair in our Middle East policies," says Buffum.

"The problem is compounded by the big-lie technique of the radicals, most recently in the aftermath of an Israeli commando raid on Beirut when the guerrillas mounted a press campaign saying there was collusion between the United States and Israel in the raid."

U.S. officials publicly denied local press charges that some of the Israeli guerrillas were hidden at the U.S. Embassy.

B.C. FED., NDP SPLIT 'INVENTED'

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labor, says the much-publicized split between himself and the New Democratic government in B.C. was "simply an invention of the press."

He told members of the Port Alberni NDP Association he does not view the federation's objections to certain clauses in the new labor code as proof of an irreparable split between labor and the government.

"On the contrary when the B.C. Federation becomes afraid to criticize any government about its labor laws, it means the death of federation," said Haynes, as he reaffirmed his membership in the party, which formed the government in August, 1972.

Court Rematch for Kingsview

Victoria lawyer James Gow filed an "originating notice of motion" in Supreme Court Tuesday that will start proceedings to try and quash a North Cowichan bylaw permitting the building of 1,250 housing units by Kingsview Properties Ltd.

The writ represents 85 Maple Bay residents, who have each filed persona affidavits in addition.

An earlier bylaw was quashed this year when irate residents took their case to court.

Council gave final reading Sept. 26 to the bylaw now in contention, having made several amendments to the original bylaw without holding a public hearing.

Four stormy public hearings were held on the quashed bylaw, the first on March 8 which lasted until early next morning.

Gow's partner, Ian Stewart, said today the new action will seek to have the bylaw declared illegal and the land-use contract between North Cowichan and Kingsview declared void.

Among the various grounds cited for quashing, Stewart said they would contend the public hearings held after March 9 were illegal because no adjournment date was set after the hearing ended. This, he said, contravened a section of the Municipal Act.

"They (council) adopted a bylaw and did not exercise its powers in the public interest. The whole purpose of the bylaw was to benefit Kingsview. They acted in an unreasonable and arbitrary manner notwithstanding overwhelming public disapproval."

Maple Bay residents contend that the huge development will overtax utilities, cause massive traffic problems and destroy ecology of the area.

CHAIN CRASH HURTS 2

A five-vehicle collision on Fort Street Tuesday caused an estimated $2,500 damage and sent two drivers to hospital.

Joan Grivel, 821 Wollaston, and Jacob Schuring, 512 Vincent, were treated at Royal Jubilee Hospital for bruises, and released.

City police said Mrs. Grivel and Schuring were stopped to allow Victor LeTendre to turn into his driveway at 1678 Fort when a van, driven by Terrence Bompas, 3290 Cedar Hill, struck a car driven by Albert Whetung, 1240 Fort, which was also stopped behind Schuring.

The impact pushed all cars forward.

Tutor Project Started

One to One, as the program is called, supplies volunteer tutors for children or adults needing help with their studies.

Spence, a 31-year-old teacher at Richmond elementary, conceived the idea a month ago and has already got 25 students and some volunteer teachers lined up.

He's still looking for retired teachers, student teachers and practising teachers, and anyone else who would like to teach to offer their services.

Each will be assigned a student to help out — adults doing upgrading, people taking correspondence courses, school dropouts, native Indians needing special tutoring, or new Canadians having trouble with English.

The tutoring service is free to anyone who needs it, said Spence in an interview Tuesday.

As far as the volunteer teachers go, "we're accepting anybody," he said. If an adult can "spread some of his excitement, some of the knowledge he has" then he can teach.

The tutoring will take place in either teacher's or student's home at a time they both agree on.

Spence said his greatest need right now is to find a volunteer who is near a phone much of the day and is willing to take all the calls that he is now handling alone.

Anyone interested in teaching or needing a tutor can call Spence at 385-3166.

WE RUN A VERY simple business

Economy never looked better.

Who says an economy car has to be an import?

Who says economy can't be beautiful?

Economy never looked better than with our small economy car. The 1974 Pontiac Astre. It's Canadian built but priced below many of the top-selling import models. Surprising isn't it?

Beautiful? Just look for yourself. Maybe Astre looks more expensive than it really is, but that's okay with us...and probably you too!

So buying an economy car doesn't mean you have to forsake style for price.

The new low-profile front end look of the Astre is just the beginning. It's backed up by four body styles; the low sleek appearance of the Hatchback, the sporty notchback styling of the Coupe, or the great looks and luggage capacity of the Safari Wagon. For business, there's the economical and easy to handle Astre Panel Van.

Inside, Astre is comfortable, with Premier plaid cloth-and-vinyl trims over deep full-foam seating, and the head and legroom rivals many bigger cars.

The standard lightweight aluminum-alloy 2300 cc engine is very easy on gas, and gives you all the get-up-and-go you need.

Want to add a little more to your Astre? Ask your dealer about the GT Hatchback or Safari Wagon, the Salon Deluxe Coupe, and the Safari Custom Wagon.

The 1974 Pontiac Astre. A Canadian-built economy car that's beautiful! Now you know why economy never looked better.

The Royal Alexandra

THE HOTCAKE

Our $47,500 Beach Drive Apartment

that's selling like there's no tomorrow

Sure this apartment would sell like a "hotcake" anywhere but put it on Beach Drive in Oak Bay where the high cost of land doesn't usually allow for so much space and value at such a moderate price—and you can really see what the excitement is all about.

The ROYAL ALEXANDRA has three other one and two-bedroom models from just $29,900-$49,900.

Come see them quick, because we won't have them long. They're selling like hotcakes.

AND WHEREAS the provisions of Section 766 of the Municipal Act have been duly complied with:

AND WHEREAS under the provisions of subsection (4b) of Section 766 of the Municipal Act, the annual net cost of any function granted pursuant to subsection (4a) of said Section shall not exceed the product of two mills on the assessed value referred to in subsection (1) of Section 782 within the participating member municipalities; and the annual net cost of all functions granted pursuant to subsection (4a) shall not exceed the product of three mills on such assessed values:

NOW KNOW YE that by these presents, we do order and proclaim that on, from, and after the date hereof the following be added to the objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations and conditions of the Capital Regional District and the Letters Patent of the Capital Regional District be amended accordingly:

DIVISION X—Refuse Disposal

1. Wherever the term "refuse" is used in these Letters Patent, it shall include all noxious, offensive, unwholesome and discarded materials and the said materials may be classified by by-law.
2. It shall be a function of the Capital Regional District within the Regional District, to provide refuse disposal facilities and in particular but without limiting the generality of the foregoing:
   (a) To acquire, construct, maintain, operate and regulate transfer depots or stations with facilities for receiving collected refuse and for packing, processing, loading and transporting the said refuse to disposal grounds.
   (b) To acquire, establish, maintain, operate and regulate refuse disposal grounds and facilities wherever appropriate within the region, having regard to population distribution and distances.
   (c) To compel persons within all or designated portions of the region to make use of any system established for the disposal of refuse and to prescribe the terms and conditions upon which persons make use of such system and to impose fines and penalties in respect thereof.
   (d) To establish a scale of charges payable for depositing refuse at a transfer depot or station or at a disposal ground and for compelling payment of the charges so fixed.
   (e) To enter into contracts to provide refuse disposal service and to specify the terms and conditions under which the service will be provided.
   (f) To enter into contracts with any person for all or part of the removal of refuse from any transfer depot or station and for the disposal of refuse.
3. All member municipalities shall participate in the function of the Capital Regional District provided by this Division.
4. The annual operating cost of providing refuse disposal service shall be recovered in its entirety from the charges collected from the persons, municipalities or other governmental agencies for the service provided to them.
5. The annual net cost attributable to this function shall not exceed the product of one-half mill on taxable assessed values for school purposes in the current year, excluding property that is taxable for school purposes only by special Act. "Annual net cost" shall include the amortization of the cost of acquiring land and fixed plant repaid over an extended period of time and shall be considered as of benefit to all the participating member municipalities and not necessarily related to the refuse currently generated by them.
6. The annual net cost attributable to this function shall be apportioned among the participating municipalities on the basis of 75% population as defined in the Municipal Act and 25% on the assessed value of improvements as fixed for taxation for school purposes in the current year, excluding property that is taxable for school purposes only by special Act.
7. The amount of debt incurred with respect to this function shall not exceed ONE MILLION DOLLARS (1,000,000,000.00).

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.

WITNESS, the Honourable Walter S. Owen, Q.C., LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of Our said Province of British Columbia, in Our City of Victoria, in Our said Province, this 4th day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventy-three, and in the twenty-second year of Our Reign.

Police Expect Rowdy Halloween Spirits

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Each Halloween, Inspector Harry Adams, a 24-year veteran with the Saanich police, prays it will rain.

But only after 9 p.m.

He figures that should give youngsters enough time to have their fun ... so why prolong it and tempt the older kids into mischief.

Not that his force, nor any of the other forces in the Greater Victoria area, are expecting major problems. There have been few, in fact, since 1966 when the Capital Regional District passed bylaw Number 3 prohibiting the sale of firecrackers.

Law enforcement officers such as Oak Bay's chief constable John Green regard the bylaw as the most significant act in deterring teenage hooliganism.

"It's been quiet the past four or five years," says Green. "So much so Halloween is becoming enjoyable!"

The statement would have been rank heresy 15 years ago.

Police place the credit where it's due — with the kids. An Esquimalt police spokesman lauded "if juveniles behave as they've done in the past three years we're going to have another good Halloween."

Despite the optimism, police departments are gearing to meet any emergency.

There is an obvious difficulty. "We're planning for the unknown," Inspector Adams says. "That's the worst part."

Most departments report they will have augmented shifts on patrol Oct. 31. In some areas, such as Colwood, that means practically the entire compliment of 22 to 24 officers. In others, such as Oak Bay, it means double shifting, putting the day shift on overtime. Still others, such as Esquimalt and Victoria say they will have supplementary police help without specifying how much.

Auxiliary police will be used extensively especially in outlying communities such as Central Saanich and Sooke.

In addition the Juan de Fuca Citizens Band Radio Club will assist police wherever needed.

There is one overriding aim to all this display of police and civic-minded strength: Ensuring the tiny tots who really believe in the spirits of Halloween have a memorable evening.

To that end, in most municipalities, bonfires are de rigeur.

It is still too early to tell how many community bonfires will light the greater Victoria skies. Those in the planning stages include:

—Oak Bay fire department and Kiwanians plan a bonfire in Foreman's Park with costume judging, music, hot-dogs and pop;

—Langford fire department plans to host a bonfire and costume party at Centennial Park, Carlow and Goldstream, beginning at 6:30 p.m.;

—Sooke volunteer fire department intends to put on a fireworks display as well as costume parade and competition, a police spokesman said;

—In Sidney, police strength will be boosted from its regular two men to 14 in an attempt to prevent any vandalism before it begins, said Sgt. Harry Chambers. Last year Beacon Avenue merchants spent the morning after Haloween repairing cracked windows and cleaning spattered eggs from their shops.

—Dances will be held in North Saanich and Sidney.

—In Esquimalt two bonfires are planned, one at Gorge Park, the other at Kinver Beach, both beginning at 6:30, replete with costume parades, singsongs and the ubiquitous hot dog. The Lions club and municipality jointly sponsor the events.

In the two largest municipalities, Saanich and Victoria, no activities have been announced as yet by civic or service club groups.

However, Victoria fire department reports six requests for permits for community bonfires have been received to date. And Saanich reports four.

Chile Executes More Extremists

SANTIAGO (Reuter)—Four more left-wing extremists have been executed in Chile, military officials announced Tuesday. The four, who were shot at dawn Monday in the southern province of Concepcion, had planned to assassinate members of the armed forces, the military said.

Science Contracting in Trouble

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — After only a year, problems are cropping up to face the government's new policy to contract out more and more federal research to industry.

The latest science spending report from Statistics Canada says the policy won't really start to be felt until the next fiscal year.

And it concludes that so far "there is no evidence from the present survey of any major shifts in contracting requirements" on the part of Ottawa.

More important, the prospects of a much tighter federal science budget for next year threatens to undercut the policy's implementation and even to push back Ottawa's target date of 1980 for having industry doing more federally-supported research than the government's own laboratories.

Government sources say science agencies and departments are being told to hold the line on budgets this year, as part of the government's fight against inflation.

Once source said that Treasury Board, which manipulates the purse strings in Ottawa, is imposing a formula that will give most agencies the same sort of increase in their spending as they got last year, with extra money to cover salary increases and perhaps another additional amount to cover some of the inroads of inflation.

There would be two major effects of such a budget: The growth of federal science spending would likely flatten out somewhat and might even drop slightly; and new programs will undoubtedly get cut.

For the new contracting out policy, both effects could mean serious trouble.

First of all, officials in charge of the contracting-out program say they need to have science spending grow at about 12 or 13 per cent a year to be able to meet their targets during the coming five years.

Second, and most important, the policy covers only new science programs. In some instances, it also covers additions to existing programs.

During times of tight budgets, new programs get chopped back or chopped out. And inflation pushes up the costs of running present programs artificially and gobbles up part of the normal increase.

This year, since the beginning of April, Ottawa has contracted out slightly more than $9-million to industry, universities and individuals.

The target for this fiscal year, officials say, is $25-million to $30-million. And the program is already slightly off target, by about $200,000 according to projections.

Next year, the target is $60-million in contracts, more than double what will be achieved this year.

SPENDING BREAKS RECORDS

Times Ottawa Bureau

For the first time ever, the federal natural science budgetary estimates surpass the $1 billion mark—$1.03 billion to be more exact.

And that's good.

But also for the first time in a decade, the percentage of the natural science budget devoted to actual research and development activities has dropped.

According to Statistics Canada, only 72 per cent of the budget for 1973-74 is being devoted to R and D, compared to an average of 75 per cent for the previous 10 years.

On the increase is the percentage being spent on scientific information activities, including the operation of science libraries and the dissemination of scientific information and knowledge.

This year, eight per cent of the budget is going to these activities, almost double the amount spent in 1971.

The $1.03 billion being spent represents about 5.6 per cent of the total federal budget for the year.

As in past years, the largest proportion is being spent for scientific activities in the government's own laboratories: An estimated 64 per cent.

Only 18 per cent will be spent in industry, with an additional 16 per cent being spent in universities and non-profit institutions.

The environment department and the agriculture department continue to have the highest expenditures on research and development in government. Environment has $73.7 million, most of it done in-house, up 7.4 per cent from last year. Agriculture has $68.9 million, up 10.4 per cent.

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. has $65.8 million and the National Research Council has $47.6 million for R and D this year, ranking them third and fourth.

The federal government also plans to spend $111 million to collect scientific data, about $43 million for scientific testing and standards research, $20 million in feasibility studies, $10 million in research fellowships, and $18 million on science scholarships.

An estimated $163 million is to be paid out to industry for research and development, plus an additional $21 million for related scientific activities.

Last year, the statistics predicted $160 million would be spent in industry, but in fact only $140.1 million was actually spent during 1972-73. Thus, industry did not get much of an increase in comparing estimates between the two years.

Tulips Can Answer Any Given Mood

Tulips are now so various in height and time of blooming that gardeners must decide before buying just what effects they wish to have from their bulbs.

Do you want eager little tulips to bloom while the chill of winter is still around, or do you want stately beauties delaying their public appearance until summer has almost arrived?

You can have either, or both. And you can have tulips growing in a wide open garden exposed to strong wind; you can grow them on sunny apartment balconies, you can sit among planters full of tulips on a sundeck or a patio. And you can show off marvellous color combinations to the world at large by planting hundreds of bulbs in beds and borders facing the street.

Tulip varieties may be as old as history of the genus or newly discovered as wild species (in the last five years) on the hills of Greece and Turkey. Hybrids of the large flowered tulip types are mostly raised in Holland.

Even fragrance is not missing from the genus as a whole but you need to know which have it.

Several varieties in the single flowered earlies are abundantly fragrant — look for Bellona, yellow; General de Wet, orange with gold; Prince of Austria, orange scarlet; and a sport of Prince of Austria called Prince Carnival, a good yellow with red.

The Triumph, Darwin, Breeder and Parrot tulips have little perfume other than the lovely freshness of all growing things. So we come to the late blooming lily-flowered tulips for the next trace of perfume as present in Alaska, a yellow.

Short stemmed tulips with large flowers are a feature of the Kaufmaniana group and the Greigii.

In the Kaufmanianas are the well known varieties Cesar Franck, Goudstuk, Chopin, Shakespeare, from five to eight inches high.

The Fosteriana group contains the startling variety Red Emperor which came to Canada in the late 1940's. It flowers on 18-inch stems with an enormous spread of 10 to 11 inches if my memory doesn't fail me. Almost as large, but on eight-inch stems, you can have Fosteriana princeps. It blooms later than Red Emperor, but is a fine showy tulip for planting where wind is a problem to taller varieties.

Of interest to gardeners who have never grown them are the varieties of Greigii, having beautifully mottled foliage.

Oriental Beauty, Pandour and Red Riding Hood, all scarlet, or flushed with cream, have flowers on stems from seven to nine inches long. The leaves attract as much comment as the lovely flowers, for they are heavily, or lightly, mottled with brown purplish stripes or dots, according to variety.

Whatever your choice in tulips, get the bulbs in before the middle of November. Prepare the beds now; let them settle; then plant the bulbs when the soil is well cooled. You don't want them making early top growth. You want good roots first.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Had our South declarer in today's deal given thought to the practical significance of East's play at trick one, he would have fulfilled his contract. But, as will become evident, South played mechanically, giving no thought whatsoever to East's play at the first trick.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ◇.

West made a good guess when he elected to lead a diamond, the suit which South had bid initially. Had he chosen to lead any other suit, South would have fulfilled his contract automatically, for upon gaining the lead he would have cashed the ace and king of diamonds. With East failing to follow suit to the second diamond lead, dummy's jack would now have become an entry to dummy.

On West's opening lead of the diamond three, the five was played from dummy, East followed with the four-spot, and South played the deuce. The six of diamonds was then led, East discarding a heart as declarer captured the trick with his ace.

As is evident, declarer was unable to cash four spades, since he could not reach dummy except in the spade suit. And so he went down a trick, a victim of his own carelessness.

When East followed suit with the diamond four on dummy's five-spot, it should have been clear to declarer that East possessed no higher diamond; and that, hence, West had started with the Q-10-7-3. Had declarer been aware of this position, he would have been able to utilize dummy's jack of diamonds as an entry to dummy for the cashing of the ace and king of spades.

Instead of winning the opening lead as economically as possible (with the board's five-spot) declarer should have won the trick with his king of diamonds. Then would come the ace of diamonds revealing that East's four of diamonds was, in fact, a singleton. Next would come the queen of spades, followed by the jack of spades. A low diamond would then be led towards dummy's remaining doubleton J-8. West, having the Q-10 left, couldn't now prevent the board's diamond jack from winning a trick.

Had declarer played the hand as recommended, he would have ended up making four spade tricks, three diamonds, a heart, and a club.

Was This Used To Kill McGee?

TORONTO (CP) — Ballistic experts here say they cannot be sure whether the gun of the man hanged for the murder of Thomas D'Arcy McGee 105 years ago was the murder weapon.

Robert Nichol, head of the Centre for Forensic Sciences, said the bullet taken from McGee's shattered skull seems to match the gun seized later from James Whelan, but he cannot be positive.

"The bullet is so badly eroded after a century it's impossible to say for certain," Nichol said.

McGee, a drinking partner of Sir John A. Macdonald and one of the most eloquent of the Fathers of Confederation, was returning from a late sitting of the House of Commons when he was shot in the early hours of April 7, 1868.

Whelan, then 28, was arrested a few days later. Whelan was identified with the Fenians and had made threats against McGee, an opponent of the Irish nationalist movement in Canada and the United States.

Whelan protested his innocence up to the time he was hanged Feb. 11, 1869, in the last public execution in Canada.

The Smith and Wesson .32-calibre revolver taken from Whelan, which the jury decided was the murder weapon, was apparently taken home after the trial by the policeman who arrested Whelan.

Eventually, it found its way into the family of Rupert Jeroy, who recently told Mary Burns, historian of the National Capital Commission, of its existence.

Investigators from the Ontario solicitor-general's department and a historian for Smith and Wesson are examining the weapon in attempts to pin down whether it was used to kill McGee.

Hearing Aid Plan Booming

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Health Minister Walter Smishek says more than 500 hearing aids have been supplied in the two months since the government's hearing aid program began.

Under the program, the government supplies hearing aids to the public at an average price of $75 compared to the usual average cost of $275 paid by those who patronize private dealers.

Administration, services and overhead costs the government about $75 a unit. The province employs four audiologists who hold masters' degrees.

Smishek said he was surprised at an announcement by the Saskatchewan Hearing Aid Dealers Association which said all major private dealers intend to go out of business by the end of the month.

"The dealers assured us there would be room for both services in the province."

He said that if the private dealers go out of business, the government service will honor all warranties and make any repairs.

Public Forces Parks To Reverse Order

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public opposition to the proposed closure of Diamond Head chalet in Garibaldi Park has been so strong, the provincial government has changed its mind.

The chalet will remain open as a hostel-type facility for day use during summer and winter.

The decision was released in a letter signed by recreation and conservation deputy minister Lloyd Brooks to Larry Emrick of Vancouver, one of the many private citizens who protested the closure when it was announced in September.

The letter to Emrick stated: "We have received a considerable number of letters regarding the recent newspaper article on the closing of Diamond Head lodge. After a great deal of study and research the department of recreation and conservation has decided at this time to maintain the chalet as a hostel-type facility for day use during summer and winter.

"Parks branch personnel will staff the hostel and, along with other duties, will provide emergency services as needed.

"This decision will allow the continued utilization of the chalet building by visitors to the area. We feel at this time it is the best method, in view of all the facts, to accommodate the orderly development and preservation of the Diamond Head region."

When closure of the hand-hewn log chalet, about 60 miles north of Vancouver, was announced the parks branch said it needed up to $25,000 renovations to meet fire marshal's regulations and the expense could not be justified because it accommodates only about 25 guests.

More for Co-Ops

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to give credit unions a wider base for membership, more corporate powers in the investment field and a lender-of-last-resort facility, has received approval in the Commons finance committee.

The legislation now returns to the Commons for third reading—final approval.

The bill, amending the Co-operative Credit Association Act will allow a greater flow of capital through credit unions and encourage credit co-ops to invest in a wider range of enterprises, including international ventures.

There are about seven million persons who belong to credit unions and the field is growing.

Lower Housing Standards Urged

TORONTO (CP) — A major increase in permissible housing densities and reduced standards of servicing are two solutions to the housing crisis advocated by the new president of the Canadian Real Estate Association.

Brian R. B. Magee, chairman of A. E. LePage Ltd. and Markborough Properties Ltd. of Toronto, warns prices will continue to rise and home ownership will pass beyond the reach of increasing numbers of people unless government regulations are modified to permit greater concentrations of housing units on urban land.

He says the level of servicing required for new subdivisions and the cost of land are the primary reasons for the inflationary rise in new house prices.

"The idea that increased housing density automatically means crowding is a myth.

"Large, comfortable apartment buildings already exist in urban areas that occupy only 10 to 20 per cent of their total land areas."

The traditional four single family houses to an acre is an extravagance that most Canadians can no longer afford.

Additional economies could be made to help drive housing prices down by building smaller units and reducing servicing standards.

He says that these are desirable changes that could produce important reductions in prices, but a halt to government intrusions in the housing and development business is the surest way of restoring competitive balances to the industry.

Although Ontario has made commendable efforts to reduce red tape in processing development, the municipalities are adopting "irresponsible attitudes" toward essential growth, Magee says.

He describes as an "ominous bylaw" a recent move by Toronto city council to restrict building heights in the downtown area to 45 feet as a holding action until over-all requirements are reviewed.

"What it really means is that any developer who purchased land on the assumption that he could build to a density of 12 times coverage suddenly finds he is restricted to three times coverage. It is not democratic, not equitable."

He predicts the effect will be to reduce development investment in Toronto by $225 million next year.

Such restrictive legislation, he says, can result in losses of millions of dollars overnight for developers. The Toronto action may not reduce the gross national product if investors simply move their new buildings to Montreal, but it could cost the Metro economy up to $1 billion a year.

Suez Battles Break Truce

Times News Services

Fighting broke out again today along the southern Suez Canal just as the second truce in as many days was taking hold on all Middle East war fronts.

As United Nations observers sped to the fronts to try to preserve the truce, Israel charged that the Egyptian Third Army was trying to break out of its encirclement on both banks of the Canal.

A Tel Aviv communique said 15 Egyptian planes had been shot down and fighting was continuing.

Cairo claimed that some of the Mirage fighters taking part in the Canal Zone dogfight belonged to another country," not Israel. The communique did not say to which nation the planes belonged.

Egypt also called on the United States and the Soviet Union today to send troops to the Suez Canal front to help enforce the Middle East ceasefire, according to Cairo radio.

The broadcast said President Anwar Sadat sent messages to President Nixon and Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev to dispatch forces because Israel "was continuing its aggression on both banks" of the Suez Canal.

Israel and Egypt continued to trade charges in addition to shots.

In sharply-contrasting statements, Israel said Egypt's army was disintegrating in surrenders and Egypt claimed control of most of the Suez Canal.

Egypt charged Israeli violations of the ceasefire and said Egyptian troops had been forced to respond.

On the northern end of the canal, however, and in Syria, the truce appeared to be holding.

There is widespread uncertainty as to what happens next.

Nor is there any word how peace talks specified in the United Nations truce resolution sponsored by the United States and Russia will take place.

The most violent argument between China and the Soviet Union ever seen in the Security Council almost overshadowed passage of the resolution Tuesday night calling for the reinstatement of the ceasefire.

The exchange grew so heated that the session had to be suspended for about 20 minutes to allow tempers to cool.

The verbal battle erupted when Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua objected strongly to a proposal by Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik for an immediate vote on the resolution.

He said a Chinese text of the draft was not even available, and insisted on continuing to address the Council although a proposal for an immediate vote usually takes precedence over other business.

The Chinese minister praised the "brilliant victories" which he said had been won by the forces of Egypt, Syria and the Palestinian people.

The "two super powers," on the other hand, had played "a most ignominious role" throughout.

The Soviet Union provided the Arabs with arms, "not to give true support, but to control the development of the Middle East situation so it will not go beyond the limit it has agreed with the other super power."

China again refused to participate in the vote. It termed the two ceasefire resolutions frauds and "scraps of paper" concocted in secret by "the two super-powers."

UN sources said the first group of truce observers moved into the field today, but they will not be going to their old positions along the canal.

The observers — from Sweden, England, Argentina, Ireland, Austria, France, Canada, Australia, Chile and Italy — will be redeployed in positions reflecting the new battlefield stance of the two armies.

Just before the second truce came into effect. Tel Aviv said its troops had made key gains surrounding Egyptian forces in the southern Sinai and cutting off Egypt's major petroleum port from the rest of the country.

UFOs? Ticket Them!

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit police have a full-fledged plan on the handling of creatures from unidentified flying objects.

A special group of officers has received the go-ahead to stop and frisk all aliens from other planets that are in the city or in the air space above.

In addition, the police can ticket creatures who attempt to flee or vanish.

In a seven-point departmental memo, Detroit's eight field duty inspectors were given detailed instructions on how to care for UFOs, their passengers and-or crews.

The top priority item said get them to the ground even if a bullhorn or public address system must be used. The next order of business was the traditional ticket for fleeing saucers, but with the proper copy of the citation to have on hand for future court appearances.

Diplomatic immunity for passengers or crew members of UFOs from alien planets was also required, including the separation of males and females for questioning.

Barrett To Alta. For Gas

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrett will make an emergency trip to Edmonton to arrange with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed for alternative supplies of natural gas to ease this province's crisis shortage.

Barrett told the legislature Tuesday he would to to Alberta in the wake of refusal by the federal government to restrict exports of B.C. natural gas to U.S. customers, as the provincial government has demanded.

The first indication he would go east to secure a new source of natural gas for the province's industrial users came during debate in the house Tuesday of legislation setting up a powerful new petroleum corporation with authority to control the production and processing of natural gas and petroleum resources in the province.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald urged Barrett to go, saying direct contact with Lougheed is needed for B.C. to be able to get Alberta gas.

The natural gas shortage being felt in the province is the result of production problems encountered by Westcoast Transmission Company Limited, the principal supplier of natural gas in B.C.

Westcoast has announced a cutback program to all its customers averaging between 10 and 12 per cent with the reduction going as high as 25 to 30 per cent on some days.

The effect on industrial users of the natural gas shortage is potentially disastrous with losses of up to $20 million and 250,000 man-days caused by plant shutdowns predicted for this winter if alternate supplies are not found.

Supplies in Alberta are available from two sources.

Oil Coats Park Beach

Oil up to two inches thick coated part of Stanley Park's shoreline today after an estimated 20 tons of bunker oil spilled into Vancouver harbor from the German-registered freighter Westfalia.

The spill, at Centennial Pier No. 4, was reported to Vancouver harbor master Capt. Roy Holland at 3:41 a.m.

A spokesman for Clean Seas of Canada said the firm was alerted to start a cleanup and contain the spill at 3:46 a.m.

But by 10:30 a.m. oil had coated some areas of the park's shoreline between Deadman Island and the Nine O'Clock Gun.

Oil was also reported off Lumbermen's Arch and the Clean Seas' spokesman said there were also unconfirmed reports of oil blobs in English Bay.

A thin sheen of oil was also visible east toward the Lion's Gate Bridge.

A crew of 25 men was attempting to clean the park's shoreline by hand and four tugs, hauling booms, were operating about 100 feet off Lumbermen's Arch.

The Clean Seas spokesman said the Westfalia was boomed off but a quantity of oil apparently escaped the immediate pier area as a result of a 15 to 20 mile-per-hour easterly wind whipping across the harbor.

"Conditions were very bad," he said.

A spokesman for Balfour Guthrie, agents for the Westfalia, said the oil apparently escaped from an air vent on the deck and spilled over the side into the sea.

He said the vent leads to one of the ship's oil tanks.

"It doesn't amount to very much, as far as we are concerned," he said.

A ministry of transport official said about a mile of the park's beach was affected. He said an aerial survey would be carried out to trace the movement of the crude bunker oil.

SHEFFIELD, England (AP) — A massive explosion in a gas works today left at least three people dead, a fourth victim feared dead, and 24 others injured, police said.

CANADA COSTS 'BARED'

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Quebec government documents on the province's gross national product and its balance of trade and payments show that Quebec has been a net exporter of capital and has received less from the federal government than it has paid in taxes, the Parti Quebecois claimed Tuesday. (See also Page 36.)

Party leader Rene Levesque and party economist Jacques Parizeau told a news conference that documents obtained from the provincial department of industry and commerce prove an independent Quebec would be a viable economic unit.

The documents, however, tell only part of the story, says Industry Minister Guy Saint-Pierre.

Their figures conflict with another government study and still have to be checked.

Nixon Delays Speech on TV

Times News Services

WASHINGTO N— President Nixon today cancelled a planned televised speech to the nation because the White House said he was concentrating on trying to get a Middle East ceasefire.

He will hold a televised news conference Thursday night instead. Nixon had earlier scheduled a national address on Watergate developments and asked for TV time tonight.

The president spent the night at his Camp David retreat, reportedly preparing the speech explaining his decision to relinquish his Watergate recordings and his reasons for firing Archibald Cox as Watergate special prosecutor.

However, deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren later said Nixon spent Tuesday evening conferring by telephone with State Secretary Henry Kissinger and others on the attempt to arrange a firm Middle East ceasefire.

This took up the time that the President had set aside to write his speech, Warren added.

Nixon met Kissinger shortly after his return to Washington today and Warren said he would be devoting the balance of the day to the Middle East.

Meanwhile, the House of Representatives continued today a preliminary impeachment inquiry, begun Tuesday just before Nixon's lawyers announced that the tapes would be given to a federal judge.

House leaders said the inquiry will continue at least

GAS BILL PASSES

The NDP government, acting to avert a major natural gas shortage this winter, won approval in principle to legislation allowing for the control of all gas and oil supplies produced in B.C.

Leading debate on the Petroleum Corporation Act (Bill 70), which passed second reading 32 to 15, Premier Dave Barrett and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald reiterated past declarations the people of B.C. are entitled to a fair return on their resources.

Opposition reaction was generally negative with arguments put forward that once again too much power is being concentrated in the hands of a government-appointed body.

Both Barrett and Macdonald said the province is losing as much as $100 million a year because of an underpricing of natural gas sold to foreign interests. The new petroleum corporation would be empowered to do something about this by raising the wellhead price of the resource, to 58 cents per thousand cubic feet instead of the present 37 cents.

Macdonald said decisions affecting the economic development of B.C. have been made for too long in the board rooms of foreign corporations.

Barrett was even more blunt. "It is our resource and we must husband that resource for the benefit of the people of B.C.; it's as simple as that," he said.

Ferry Contract To Seattle Firm

By LINDA HUGHES
Timesd Staff

Three new ferries, designed by a Seattle firm and costing a total of $35 million, will be operating in B.C. Ferries fleet by the summer of 1975. (See picture on Page 3.)

Transport Minister Robert Strachan said today a contract has been awarded for the design of two 376-car ferries and a trailer ferry capable of handling 64 commercial vehicles or 154 cars.

The two car ferries, expected to cost $13 million each, will be used on the proposed new Gabriola Island-Lower Mainland run, and the $9 million trailer ferry will provide 24-hour service on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run.

Nickum and Spaulding Associates Ltd. of Seattle were awarded the $577,500 design contract and have agreed to complete designs ready for construction tenders in two months.

The ships, all 457 feet in length, will be built in B.C. shipyards, Strachan said, and will involve nearly 900 jobs.

Strachan has been under fire in recent weeks from opposition members who predicted the design contract would go to the Seattle firm and demanded to know why Case Existological Laboratories of Victoria would not be given the lucrative contract.

Strachan was quick to outline to reporters today three reasons why the government decided against the Victoria firm, which was asked to submit a bid along with Nickum and Spaulding.

Time was an important factor, the minister said, and Case said it would take six months to draw up the de-

Immigrant Deadline Stays

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will not extend the period under which illegal immigrants may seek landed-immigrant status, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

The special 60-day period when illegal immigrants could make application for landed status ended Oct. 15 but Andras received representations from inside and outside the Commons for an extension.

The minister said that 33 applications for landed status were received after the deadline. He said some were permitted for compassionate reasons but added that this should not be taken as an extension of the 60-day period.

Asked if illegal immigrants now will be deported, Andras said the law will be enforced.

But outside the House, Mr. Andras assured reporters there would not be a witch hunt to track down illegal immigrants.

NOOSE BAN STAYS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons voted 119 to 106 today to limit capital punishment to killers of on-dity policemen and prison guards for another five years.

The vote was free, meaning MPs were not tied to party loyalties.

The proposals now needs only Senate approval and routine royal assent to become law.

A similar hanging ban was approved in 1967 and expired last December. In sometimes dramatic sittings, the Commons spent more than 50 hours since January debating the government bill to extend the ban.

It had been obvious from the start that the government headed by Prime Minister Trudeau wanted to end all capital punishment.

But it realized early that the best it could hope for was renewal of the previous five-year ban.

B.C. Rail Workers Voting

Close to 400 B.C. Rail tradesmen were voting today on a recommended settlement to their 10-day strike. If they accept the new contract, trains could be running Thursday.

No details of the tentative settlement, arrived at in negotiations late Tuesday, were released but union leaders recommended acceptance.

Premier Barrett, who is also president of B.C. Rail, told a cheering legislature at 6 p.m. Tuesday of the tentative settlement.

He said renewed negotiations, set up earlier in the day, had brought about the tentative agreement.

The 383 carmen, machinists, electricians and pipefitters were on strike to improve an offer ranging between 35.8 and 38 per cent over 31 months from last Jan. 1. That offer would have brought a journeyman's wage to $6.10 an hour.

TWO CAN PAY —BUILDER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada says builders are justified in charging high prices for houses because most families have two pay cheques and can afford the price.

Keith Morely also said immediate removal of federal and provincial sales taxes on building materials would not cut the price of a new house because "the main factor in the price is the demand."

BROKE HIJACKERS GROUNDED

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Four airplane hijackers, promised safe conduct to Cuba in exchange for releasing their hostages, wound up in custody today because they couldn't come up with the money to buy airline tickets to Havana.

A government spokesman said the safe conduct guarantee did not include cash for the flight out of Bolivia.

The four hijackers, two men and two women claiming to be members of the Uruguay's urban guerrilla Tupamaro movement, were told they were free to leave the country Tuesday when they released five hostages from the Aerolinas Argentinas Boeing 737 jetliner they hijacked over Argentina.

The airliner arrived Saturday at Yacubia, 500 miles from the Argentine border. After 53 hours of negotiations, in which they released 38 of the passengers and crew but threatened to kill the remaining five, the hyjackers agreed to release their hostages for the safe conduct pledge.

Until they find the money to buy airline tickets, officials said Tuesday, the four will stay in a military camp in La Paz under heavy guard.

Bolivian officials said the four commandeered the plane over Salta, Argentina, by threatening to blow it up with plastic bombs later found to be fakes filled with wastepaper. But the hijackers were armed with three small revolvers and a rifle.

Amendments to the Mines Regulations Act will allow women to work underground. This and other changes are the first major revisions in the act in 76 years. Page 10.

Also on Page 10 are details of the opposition again hammering the new labor act — the latest demand voted down by the government being a call for Canadian-only union representation on the new Labor Relations Board.

A Socialist Hand-Out? No, Sir, It's a Right

Item: The ink barely dry on my Monday notes about the chances for early retirement under the Mincome program when I had an irate call from a cultured-voice gentleman accusing me of abetting "the socialist credo of something for nothing."

I found it hard to rationalize this man's righteous indignation — a rage, really — that some couples at 60 are actually contemplating an adjustment in their lives to take government money (close to $100 a week for a couple past the 60-mark) five years ahead of the accepted retirement age.

I suppose there's something admirable in a pride or independence that would cause a man to reject this, but it's also dreadfully old-fashioned as well.

In a time when governments at every level have a restraining and guiding hand in each individual's life it seems to me the average man may accept a public purse benefit as a right, just as he accepts his contribution to it as a necessity.

When you think of the extent of that contribution over the working years of a 60-year-old breadwinner and his spouse in taxes, alone, not forgetting the ubiquitous sales tax, it seems only an elementary justice they should get something in the way of a refund when the economy will bear it, as the British Columbia economy jolly well will.

Since my caller wouldn't give me either his name or the extent of his income my hunch is that his resentment comes from a class feeling that's happily eroding.

Item: To reading this night Pierre Berton's new book Drifting Home, his account of 11 days spent rafting down the Yukon River to Dawson City, though it covers a span of three generations, and I believe it to be his most readable, memorable story.

As a friend who has always envied his sense of the past, of his own place in the passage of time and history, I found the most engrossing passages devoted to his own explanation of this peculiar talent.

Pierre writes of a particular moment when some of the party (four guides, Pierre and Janet, their seven children, a nephew and the boyfriend of one of the daughters) were asleep in the drifting rubber rafts after a sing-song and a mid-afternoon snack.

"Looking on this tranquil scene it occurs to me that this is probably the enduring vision that will return to warm me in later years," Pierre recalls. "It is very difficult to relish such moments except in retrospect. Generally, when they occur, one does not hink of them as particularly significant."

He recalls a view expressed by Somerset Maugham who confessed once that he'd enjoyed many hours of romance in various parts of the world without realizing, when they were romantic moments.

"Ever since reading those lines I have tried to see every day in terms of both the past and the future," Pierre writes. "One of the devices I use is to pretend, at any given instant, that I am an old man at the close of life thinking back to the days when I was in my prime and longing to relive them.

"Whenever I play this game the sky at once seems bluer and the grass greener. I am playing it now, lying back in the boat and looking over my family in the guise of an old man who has been given a brief repreive to re-experience a moment from the past."

The secret is as simple as that, it seems, and though I'm a little late I mean to make it my own.

Item: A chance meeting today at Ladysmith with W. J. "Red" Williams, famed as a water well-driller in his neck of the woods and throughout the Gulf Islands, and I found him curiously negative about the magical powers of the "dowser" or "diviner."

"Red" takes the view that there's no harm done if a client wants the services of one of those willow-branch-toting characters who claim to be able to locate underground streams, but in his years of drilling he's become convinced that there's less to it than meets the eye.

City people may greet the opinion with a yawn, but I know of no more controversial subject in the wide open spaces away from the water mains.

You do or you don't believe in the witch-craft of "dowsing." Those who don't will always tell you — rightly — that you can never prove a diviner to be wrong, because if you drill deep enough anywhere you'll hit water. But, as a believer, a man who has seen the willow wrenched from the iron grip of a diviner, I count it among my strongest prejudices.

Five More Cases

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer said today throat swabs have uncovered five children carrying diptheria bacteria.

But Dr. John Whitbread said it's not possible to anticipate whether the community is in for another winter outbreak. There were 47 cases from mid-March to the end of July this year.

All five of the current cases are or have been treated in hospital isolation units where antibiotics quickly clear up patients who are just carriers.

None of the five displayed diptheria symptoms but were being treated for other conditions, he said. The diphtheria was discovered through routine throat swabs.

Diphtheria, an acute infection generally centred in tonsils, larynx or nose, can generate a virulent toxin and was a particular threat to children during epidemics half a century ago. Mortality ran five to 10 per cent of cases.

The disease had all but disappeared following widespread immunization programs in recent decades but is recurring now, frequently as an infection carried by people who are unaffected by it because they have been immunized.

While immunization can protect a so-called carrier, the carrier can still harbor the disease and pass it to others.

Pre-school children can be immunized at well-baby clinics operated throughout Greater Victoria and school children receive booster immunization in Grades 1, 5 and 10 where parents grant permission. An estimated 80 per cent of children are immunized.

Arson In School Suspected

Arson is suspected in two small fires that broke out in Colquitz junior secondary school Tuesday night, a Saanich fire department spokesman said today.

Firemen were called to the school at 6:30 p.m. when smoke was discovered coming out of the girl's occupational cooking classroom.

Fire had damaged a cupboard countertop and spread up the wallboard to the ceiling before it was extinguished, the spokesman said. No damage figures are available.

Two hours later the school's custodian reported a fire had started in the janitor supply room but had gone out on its own.

The spokesman said the fire which destroyed some paper and supplies had apparently been set by a roman candle fireworks found on a shelf.

Student Pens Promote Wheel Deal

More than 1,000 letters were added Tuesday to a growing five-foot high stack of letters supporting a bicycle trail on southern Vancouver Island.

Radford's plan for the bike trail is to use the CN right-of-way from Victoria to Youbou. The idea is being opposed by the Greater Victoria Water Board which cites danger of polluting the city's area's water supplies and fire danger to woods within the board's vast land holdings.

Radford told students he wasn't impressed with the board's arguments and hopes to make a decision within two months on the scheme.

Pollen Knocks Radford Action

If Recreation Minister Jack Radford was doing his job properly he would have consulted the Greater Victoria Water Board before "drumming up" public support for a cycling trail between Victoria and Lake Cowichan, Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

Pollen said the efforts of Radford and his "cohorts" to promote the idea of a trail along the CN right-of-way are precluding the possibility of any objective discusiuons on the board's concerns over the possible pollution threat to Greater Victoria's water supply.

He was commenting on Radford's statement to a group of Victoria students Tuesday, indicating the minister is strongly in favor of the trail proposal and encouraged by "thousands and thousands and thousands" of letters supporting the scheme.

Pollen repeated his earlier warnings, on a weekend tour of the water district, that the trail's section running alongside Sooke Lake could endanger the purity of the water supply, through a fire-and-erosion process or through fecal contamination.

"This is symptomatic of the sickness in the Canadian political process where we develop a protagonist-antagonist approach . . . charge at each other with swords" before sitting d wn to a rational discussion of problems, he said.

Pollen said in general he is enthusiastic about the proposed trail, but as water board chairman he also has a responsibility to husband a pristine wilderness area that feeds "one of tre most outstanding water systems in North America, if not the world."

Highrise Foe Offered Mace 'Better Image'

By PAUL MOSS

Several city aldermen have seen circulated copies of a letter written to developer J. A. Mace by Kenneth Lines, a James Bay resident and public relations consultant, in which Lines offered to undertake an advertising and public relations campaign for the developer.

Among the aims of the campaign, Lines said in the letter to Mace dated Dec. 5, 1972, would be to "cool the antagonism of consumer groups" and to "make the image of the developer a positive one."

Lines is president of the James Bay Community Association, the group which has been in the forefront of efforts to preserve the traditional character of James Bay by opposing plans for highrise development.

Representing the association in two recent public hearings which resulted in the down-zoning of large areas of James Bay, he claimed highrises cause both environmental and sociological damage to a community.

Mace, at the time the letter was written by Lines, was still battling City Hall in his attempts to build the controversial Bay Village highrise at Menzies and Simcoe.

(Thwarted in trying to get the city to excute a land-use contract for the development, Mace subsequently scaled down the concept to conform with normal zoning requirements for the area. He sold the development "package," including the building permit, to Standard Life Assurance last July).

Lines said in an interview Tuesday he does not consider any conflict of interest was involved between his professional approach to Mace and his role as a private citizen owning property and living in James Bay.

An Attempt to Discredit

For one thing, he said, he was not a member of the association at the time he wrote the letter, and only became a member about a month before he was named president in late July.

Lines said it appeared that Mace or one of his associates was circulating the correspondence in an attemtp to "discredit" the association, himself or his wife Kay (a candidate in the Nov. 17 electin for an aldermanic seat on city council).

Mace, however, said it was "curious" that someone willing to provide him with public relations expertise and advice, should have identified himself with a group which tends to label developers as "rapacious and irresponsible."

Whether by accident or design, some element of conflict appeared to be involved, he said.

"Presumably if we had taken him up on his offer things would have been easier; he would not be against us. At least people understand clearly where Jim Mace stands," he added.

Mace said he turned down Lines' offer some time last January, and learned several months later that Lines subsequently approached a Vancouver mortgage company executive, who was acting for Standard Life, with a similar offer.

Wide Experience in Promoting

In that letter to Don Graham, of Esteyn Mortgage Company, dated June 28, 1973, Lines referred to the pending acquisition of the Bay Village development, and pointed out he had wide experience in promoting major development projects.

"Perhaps the biggest was Place Bonaventure in Montreal — an $80 million development — Le Cartier, a 30-storey apartment tower and Le Chateau Champlain, the flagship of Canadian Pacific," Lines said in the letter.

"Secondly, I live in James Bay and have had major community involvement, and dialogue with City Hall, in proposed developments in the area.

"As I understand it, your provisional proposals are quite different to those of Jim Mace's. If this is the case, I am sure that presentations and written information on the subject would carry members of the community along with the final concept.

"I am, of course, well versed in the mechanics of community involvement and could work out a program that, I am sure, could be successful."

In his comments to the Times, Lines admitted that section of the letter to Esteyn could look "bad" if read out of contect, but insisted he did not regard his conduct as being in any way unethical.

Explaining the reference to "major community involvement" in the Esteyn letter, Lines said he meant by that the fact that over several months he had helped and advised his wife in her activities on behalf of the association.

He said he had therefore become involved to some extent in the community association's affairs, long before he actually became a member or served on the executive. His wife confirmed the statement, saying initially "Ken was not interested to the degree I was."

Lines said Mace has been battling communities "in an erratic way" ever since he became involved in development in B.C., and he and others like him need "someone to explain to them what they should be doing to be good community-minded citizens."

$181,305 Available

A total of $181,305 in awards and scholarships will be presented to 384 University of Victoria students Friday at the annual Academic Assembly in the UVic gymnasium.

Recognition will go to 278 undergraduate students and 79 graduate students and an additional 27 first-year students who have received a total of $9,650 in entrance awards will be honored.

Some 25 civil servants throughout the province will receive the Diploma in Public Administration, granted after a three-year Executive Development Training Program for civil servants, now in its 18th year.

Newberry May Quit As Alderman

Ald. Alan Newberry of Saanich may have to resign his seat on council early if his plans to spend a year at the University of Indiana go ahead.

Newberry, supervisor of intermediate education for Sooke School District, was granted a year's leave of absence, starting in June, 1974, by Sooke school board Tuesday.

He said today he has not decided for sure to resign his seat, but will face the issue when he comes to it.

"It's not sure enough that I'm going (to Indiana) that I'm prepared to resign my seat," he said.

Newberry hopes to complete his doctorate of education.

Alison Pageant Bound

Alison Pennie, the Sidney girl who last May won the title of Miss Victoria, left today to represent the area in the 30-contestant Miss Canada pageant in Toronto.

She will compete for the title won last year by the 1972 Miss Victoria, Gillian Regehr.

Two weeks of activity, including public appearances, parties, interviews, pictures and a Halloween Ball are scheduled during the pageant, leading up to the night of decision Nov. 5, when the pageant will be nationally televised, starting at 7:30 p.m. Victoria time.

Miss Pennie, 19, of 10411 Resthaven, is a Claremont High graduate taking teacher training at University of Victoria and counts sports and singing as her hobbies.

City Girl Wins $2,000 Award

A 16-year-old Victoria girl has been awarded a $2,000 scholarship by Shawnigan Lake's Strathcona Lodge School.

Cindy Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Johnson, 2991 Austin Ave., won the scholarship for further study at the school. She is a grade 11 student.

The award was based on good character, scholastic achievement, athletic ability and leadership potential.

Saanich Adds to Swan Lake

Saanich's municipal planning committee decided in closed session Tuesday to recommend another 21.1 acres of land be bought toward what could eventually be a 91.18 acres ecological teaching area in the Swan Lake-Christmas Hill district.

In a plan that envisions the establishment of nature houses, teaching facilities and hiking trails, the area would provide a nature haven for students, botanists and the general hiking public.

Committee chairman Ald. Frank Waring said Tuesday the project may take as long as 25 years to complete.

Copies of a special report, outling the program, are being circulated to various organizations that might help in acquiring the land Waring said.

Ald. Edith Gunning today named some of the organizations that the special report suggested might join Saanich on the project.

"There is no way Saanich can acquire all the land," she said, "although we did buy 54 acres (at a cost of $230,000), as a result of the highly successful 1965 referendum (which approved an expenditure of $100,000).

"The groups that could come in on the program are the provincial department of education's community education program, the provincial department of recreation and conservation, school districts 61 and 63, the University of Victoria, the Capital Regional District, the Capital Improvement District Commission, the Victoria Natural History Society, Ducks Unlimited, the Sierra Club and local service clubs."

She said in addition to helping in acquisition costs, assistance would be needed to meet operating costs.

"There'd have to be at least one caretaker," she said.

Gunning said plans called for the acquisition of 78.88 acres, plus an additional 12.3 acres by "Saanich and others" as an extension.

"It will take the co-operative effort of many interested agencies," she said, "It's a most imaginative plan. The area is so valuable as an educational centre. Young people would become aware of the world around them and the need for conservation."

She added, "Saanich has to take the first steps by acquiring some of the property."

On Oct. 2, 1972, Saanich asked the National Second Century Fund for financial assistance in buying the land. The federal fund has earmarked $4.5 million to be spent on B.C. projects that meet its preservation of conservation requirements.

It is hoped that Nature Conservancy of Canada, a private society, and the Audabon Society, will be among the groups that lend support to the project.

Seniors' Housing Study Under Way

Assessment of housing needs of the elderly in Greater Victoria is under way following a meeting Tuesday at which representatives of 11 local senior citizens housing groups met for the first time.

The purpose of the meeting was "to begin to pool the individual experience of these societies — something we've been meaning to do for a long time," said Mrs. Pauline Baker, executive director of the Silver Threads Services who sponsored the meeting with the Victoria Senior Citizens Housing Society.

The societies agreed to match and review their waiting lists to see where duplications of names occur to determine the real need for additional senior citizens' housing.

SOGGY PUNCH MISSES CITY

The Victoria area escaped severe thunderstorms and 60 m.p.h. winds which lashed up-Island communities overnight as an unstable cold frontal system moved over the Island.

Worst hit was Tofino where .63 inches of rain was reported to have fallen in a half-hour and wind force neared 60 m.p.h.

The tail end of the frontal system is expected to move through the area later this evening and cloudy and rainy conditions with heavy southeasterly winds are predicted by the weather office.

Rainfall in Victoria is listed at .25 inches overnight bringing the monthly total to 1.98 inches, compared to the average of 2.14 inches for October.

Total rainfall reported overnight in other up-Island communities are: Tofino, 1.61 inches; Spring Island, 1.06 inches and Estevan Point .80 inches.

DOCTORS UNAWARE OF DRUG CONTENTS

MONTREAL (CP) — A study of the prescribing habits of 60 doctors in Montreal has shown "serious gaps in their exact knowledge of the contents of the drug preparations they order for their patients," says Dr. Pierre Biron, a specialist in drugs on the medical faculty of the University of Montreal.

"If this pilot survey ... were representative ... the inescapable conclusions would be that in the majority of instances when a physician signs his name below a drug-combination prescription, he does not know exactly what he is signing for," he said in a recent issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal, a magazine for doctors.

When patients receive a prescription, they assume their doctor knows what he is ordering, Biron said. His sample questionnaire, sent to 60 doctors chosen because they were easily reached and would take part, indicates this is not so.

Because of these findings, a larger survey is being done with selected doctors representing a more accurate cross-section of the profession, he said.

"We hope that this larger-scale, more representative survey will invalidate the conclusions we have drawn in this preliminary report and show physicians do know exactly what they prescribe."

In the preliminary survey, doctors were asked to name three drug combinations — preparations containing more than one ingredient — that they had prescribed in the last year. Then they were asked how many active ingredients were in the drug and what these were.

Of the 23 drugs — most of them common ones — mentioned by the doctors, in only four instances did 50 per cent or more of the doctors identify the ingredients correctly.

CUTE KITTIES don't have much to look forward to in Greater Victoria where 1,376 cats were destroyed in 1972 because their owners failed to retrieve them from the SPCA pound. Of 1,652 cats picked up, 131 were claimed and 145 found new homes. Cuteness disappears, and so does interest in feeding — and spaying or neutering to keep kitty from wandering is just a costly bother. Traffic also takes its toll on felines.

There's Room to Help Man's Best Friend

But when you also have a pet animal and it takes sick and you have to pay veterinary bills, it is the kind of expense over and above day-to-day necessities that sometimes is just too much to bear.

That's when the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals steps in with help.

SPCA Victoria branch manager Dave Beeching has a sheaf of examples of how the society has helped those in need.

A lady with a 19-year-old cat — "a real good age for a cat" — had a $26 bill for stitches for her injured pet paid by the SPCA. She was in financial difficulties.

Another lady, on welfare, had a small dog which needed speying. The lady also had to go to hospital. The SPCA paid for the speying.

In cases like these, the SPCA has paid anywhere from $10 to $35 "for people who need assistance," often for their only companion — a pet dog or cat.

Your dollars contributed to United Way help in providing this assistance to the needy, and to educational programs arranged by the SPCA.

Other activities of the SPCA are paid for by voluntary contributions outside the United Way and pound fees in contract arrangements with Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

The SPCA received $750 from the United Way in 1973.

Discussing the general activities of the SPCA, Beeching quickly reviewed some recent correspondence, including a letter from Michigan State regarding zoos, the Alberta wildlife branch about humane trapping, a letter to a distraught lady over the death of her dog, a letter to a supporter about a B.C. SPCA brief on abandoned horses, the seizing and release of four Great Danes on Saturna Island and a "lengthy" letter to Victoria city regarding animal control.

Beeching said everyone seems to know about stray dogs, but most people don't know that there are almost twice as many stray cats.

Figures for 1972 show 990 dogs were impounded — and 1,652 cats. Owners claimed 458 dogs and new homes were found for 72 but owners claimed only 131 cats while 145 found new homes.

The unclaimed and unwanted animals have to be destroyed. "There is no other way," said Beeching.

Established Women's Groups Meet Challenge of Priorities

elizabeth forbes

Are long-established women's organizations in Canada fighting for existence today? Are they gradually being nudged aside by newer and less highly organized groups that work with persistence and uncompromising zeal, without the restraints imposed by historical and constitutional bonds?

These questions and others like them, are being asked all across the country and they are bringing forth some serious and concerned ideas.

Amongst the most thought provoking were expressed by Mrs. Gwendolyn Black, retiring president of the Canadian Federation of University Women, in a talk at its 19th triennial conference held in Ottawa in August.

Mrs. Black was speaking, of course, to members of her own federation. However, her ideas are equally important and equally applicable to every long-established women's organization in Canada.

Most women (in such organizations) have "a highly developed sense of priorities," she said, "but we are easily distracted and we labor under some difficulties.

"We find ourselves in an era of women's liberation, not yet ready to accept the role as it is fashioned by our younger and more militant sisters; we find ourselves in an age of equality of opportunity, not yet ready to understand either equality or opportunity; we find ourselves in a time of doubt and suspicion, not ready to trust one another."

"Moreover," she added, "although we have all been trained in some discipline, we are not ready to apply a similar measure of commitment to the responsibilities inherent in a voluntary organization."

Results can only be achieved by effort and effort must be expended by everyone, she believed, "not just one-third strength" (which is about the present level of effort in many women's organizations).

Looking briefly at her three years in office (1970-73) Mrs. Black spoke of unrest in education, ethnic problems, fear for the environment and the fact that women's status was in a twilight zone, halfway between the report and the recommendations.

"Gradually we began to see these events in the light of what could be done at the local level to avert further disaster ... and community involvement became our main concern."

Through this involvement, the retiring national president believed clubs in CFUW "are learning to survey, compare, question, analyse and broaden our preceptions and horizons ... and ultimately, we will be prepared to take action at local, provincial and national level with the speed and assurance which comes from many of us, not just a few of us, knowing what we're doing."

In the meantime, she said, CFUW (and, I would say, other long established women's groups) must take steps to move into the last quarter of the 20th century with initiative and a sense of dedicated direction "or we will be swamped by the rising tide" of the more aggressive "but not always as well balanced" groups.

These create "the fertile climate in which change and improvements can take place. Their sometimes brilliant leaders are the impressarios, and results are unlikely to be produced without their high-style publicity, controversy and consciousness-raising."

Their voices are raised not only with regard to matters affecting the status of women, they are concerned with new approaches to education, with freedoms of opinion on current issues and with new confidence in themselves.

"We would do well to listen," Mrs. Black cautions. On the other had she reminds us that our present society is sensitive to the requests of organizations like CFUW and is expectant of reasoned demands from them.

Therefore, these new groups "will change neither laws nor attitudes without the steady pressures of those who undertake the more sober techniques of responsible action."

This is the role, of course, that all long-established and responsible women's organizations are well suited by skill and inclination.

As Mrs. Black says "there is nothing wrong with our structure — it is basically sound and efficient; there is nothing wrong with our communication system — it, too, is sound and as swift as we (the individual clubs) allow it to be.

"It is the human factor which is the saboteur, and until we devise safeguards to protect us from the Ladies-Aid-syndrome, we will continue to give less than our best."

She concludes with the belief that the strength and survival of her own organization (and, certainly of other comparable organizations) "rests equally on the local clubs and on the quality of leadership at all levels, and without exception."

He's Slim At 182

Ron was born 29 years ago at Beiseker, 30 miles northeast of Calgary. But his friends say he was really born in 1972, when his friends stopped calling him Fatso after he lost 158 pounds.

"My navel never saw sunshine until '72," Ron says as he recalls his years of "never feeling like I had any bones."

He was a "chubby" youngster, a "plump" teenager and a "jolly" university student. He eventually carried 340 pounds on a five-foot-nine frame.

As an education student at the University of Alberta he was lonely.

"I'd go to class early to find a left-handed desk so it would be easier to write. I always wore a sweater and a coat — I could never button it — and would just sit there, never talking or challenging professors. I didn't wany anyone to notice the fat guy."

Socially, he developed a "fat, jolly exterior."

Peru Starts Up Car Production

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru has taken the first tentative steps to buttress its baby automotive industry by going into the production of component parts such af engines, transmission systems, axles, gears and clutches. At present, automaking is limited to assembling knockdown kits imported from abroad.

THE HOTCAKE

Our $47,500 Beach Drive Apartment

that's selling like there's no tomorrow

Sure this apartment would sell like a "hotcake" anywhere but put it on Beach Drive in Oak Bay where the high cost of land doesn't usually allow for so much space and value at such a moderate price—and you can really see what the excitement is all about.

The ROYAL ALEXANDRA has three other one and two-bedroom models from just $29,900-$49,900.

Come see them quick, because we won't have them long. They're selling like hotcakes.

AND WHEREAS by Section 766 of the Municipal Act it is provided, inter alia, that, in addition to the functions conferred by that Act, a regional district has such functions as are provided by Letters Patent or supplementary Letters Patent, and for this purpose, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Minister, provide in the Letters Patent or supplementary Letters Patent such further objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations and conditions in respect to any or all functions requested pursuant to this Section:

NOW KNOW YE that by these presents, we do order and proclaim that on, from, and after the date hereof the following be added to the objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations and conditions of the Capital Regional District and the Letters Patent of the Capital Regional District be amended accordingly:

DIVISION X—Refuse Disposal

1. Wherever the term "refuse" is used in these Letters Patent, it shall include all noxious, offensive, unwholesome and discarded materials and the said materials may be classified by by-law.
2. It shall be a function of the Capital Regional District within the Regional District, to provide refuse disposal facilities and in particular but without limiting the generality of the foregoing:
   (a) To acquire, construct, maintain, operate and regulate transfer depots or stations with facilities for receiving collected refuse and for packing, processing, loading and transporting the said refuse to disposal grounds.

   (d) To establish a scale of charges payable for depositing refuse at a transfer depot or station or at a disposal ground and for compelling payment of the charges so fixed.
   (e) To enter into contracts to provide refuse disposal service and to specify the terms and conditions under which the service will be provided.
   (f) To enter into contracts with any person for all or part of the removal of refuse from any transfer depot or station and for the disposal of refuse.
3. All member municipalities shall participate in the function of the Capital Regional District provided by this Division.
4. The annual operating cost of providing refuse disposal service shall be recovered in its entirety from the charges collected from the persons, municipalities or other governmental agencies for the service provided to them.
5. The annual net cost attributable to this function shall not exceed the product of one-half mill on taxable assessed values for school purposes in the current year, excluding property that is taxable for school purposes only by special Act. "Annual net cost" shall include the amortization of the cost of acquiring land and fixed plant repaid over an extended period of time and shall be considered as of benefit to all the participating member municipalities and not necessarily related to the refuse currently generated by them.
6. The annual net cost attributable to this function shall be apportioned among the participating municipalities on the basis of 75% population as defined in the Municipal Act and 25% on the assessed value of improvements as fixed for taxation for school purposes in the current year, excluding property that is taxable for school purposes only by special Act.
7. The amount of debt incurred with respect to this function shall not exceed ONE MILLION DOLLARS (1,000,000.00).

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.

Police Expect Rowdy Halloween Spirits

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Each Halloween, Inspector Harry Adams, a 24-year veteran with the Saanich police, prays it will rain.

But only after 9 p.m.

He figures that should give youngsters enough time to have their fun ... so why prolong it and tempt the older kids into mischief.

Not that his force, nor any of the other forces in the Greater Victoria area, are expecting major problems. There have been few, in fact, since 1966 when the Capital Regional District passed bylaw Number 3 prohibiting the sale of firecrackers.

Law enforcement officers such as Oak Bay's chief constable John Green regard the bylaw as the most significant act in deterring teenage hooliganism.

"It's been quiet the past four or five years," says Green. "So much so Halloween is becoming enjoyable!"

The statement would have been rank heresy 15 years ago.

Police place the credit where it's due — with the kids. An Esquimalt police spokesman lauded "if juveniles behave as they've done in the past three years we're going to have another good Halloween."

Despite the optimism, police departments are gearing to meet any emergency.

There is an obvious difficulty. "We're planning for the unknown," Inspector Adams says. "That's the worst part."

Most departments report they will have augmented shifts on patrol Oct. 31. In some areas, such as Colwood, that means practically the entire compliment of 22 to 24 officers. In others, such as Oak Bay, it means double shifting; putting the day shift on overtime. Still others, such as Esquimalt and Victoria say they will have supplementary police help without specifying how much.

Auxiliary police will be used extensively especially in outlying communities such as Central Saanich and Sooke.

In addition the Juan de Fuca Citizens Band Radio Club will assist police wherever needed.

There is one overriding aim to all this display of police and civic-minded strength: Ensuring the tiny tots who really believe in the spirits of Halloween have a memorable evening.

To that end, in most municipalities, bonfires are de rigeur.

It is still too early to tell how many community bonfires will light the greater Victoria skies. Those in the planning stages include:

—Oak Bay fire department and Kiwanians plan a bonfire in Foreman's Park with costume judging, music, hot dogs and pop;

—Langford fire department plans to host a bonfire and costume party at Centennial Park, Carlow and Goldstream, beginning at 6:30 p.m.;

—Sooke volunteer fire department intends to put on a fireworks display as well as costume parade and competition, a police spokesman said;

—In Sidney, police strength will be boosted from its regular two men to 14 in an attempt to prevent any vandalism before it begins, said Sgt. Harry Chambers. Last year Beacon Avenue merchants spent the morning after Haloween repairing cracked windows and cleaning spattered eggs from their shops.

—Dances will be held in North Saanich and Sidney.

—In Esquimalt two bonfires are planned, one at Gorge Park, the other at Kinver Beach, both beginning at 6:30, replete with costume parades, singsongs and the ubiquitous hot dog. The Lions club and municipality jointly sponsor the events.

In the two largest municipalities, Saanich and Victoria, no activities have been announced as yet by civic or service club groups.

However, Victoria fire department reports six requests for permits for community bonfires have been received to date. And Saanich reports four.

Suez Battles Break Truce

Times News Services

Fighting broke out again today along the southern Suez Canal just as the second truce in as many days was taking hold on all Middle East war fronts.

As United Nations observers sped to the fronts to try to preserve the truce, Israel charged that the Egyptian Third Army was trying to break out of its encirclement on both banks of the canal.

A Tel Aviv communique said 15 Egyptian planes had been shot down and fighting was continuing.

Cairo claimed that some of the Mirage fighters taking part in the Canal Zone dogfight belonged to another country, not Israel. The communique did not say to which nation the planes belonged.

Egypt also called on the United States and the Soviet Union today to send troops to the Suez Canal front to help enforce the Middle East ceasefire, according to Cairo radio.

The broadcast said President Anwar Sadat sent messages to President Nixon and Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev to dispatch forces because Israel "was continuing its aggression on both banks" of the Suez Canal.

Israel and Egypt continued to trade charges in addition to shots.

In sharply-contrasting statements, Israel said Egypt's army was disintegrating in surrenders and Egypt claimed control of most of the Suez Canal.

Egypt charged Israeli violations of the ceasefire and said Egyptian troops had been forced to respond.

On the northern end of the canal, however, and in Syria, the truce appeared to be holding.

There is widespread uncertainty as to what happens next.

Nor is there any word how peace talks specified in the United Nations truce resolution sponsored by the United States and Russia will take place.

The most violent argument between China and the Soviet Union ever seen in the Security Council almost overshadowed passage of the resolution Tuesday night calling for the reinstatement of the ceasefire.

The exchange grew so heated that the session had to be suspended for about 20 minutes to allow tempers to cool.

The verbal battle erupted when Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua objected strongly to a proposal by Soviet Ambassador Jacob Malik for an immediate vote on the resolution.

He said a Chinese text of the draft was not even available, and insisted on continuing to address the Council although a proposal for an immediate vote usually takes precedence over other business.

The Chinese minister praised the "brilliant victories" which he said had been won by the forces of Egypt, Syria and the Palestinian people.

The "two super powers," on the other hand, had played "a most ignominious role" throughout.

The Soviet Union provided the Arabs with arms, "not to give true support, but to control the development of the Middle East situation so it will not go beyond the limit it has agreed with the other super power."

China again refused to participate in the vote. It termed the two ceasefire resolutions frauds and "scraps of paper" concocted in secret by "the two super-powers."

UN sources said the first group of truce observers moved into the field today, but they will not be going to their old positions along the canal.

The observers — from Sweden, England, Argentina, Ireland, Austria, France, Canada, Australia, Chile and Italy — will be redeployed in positions reflecting the new battlefield stance of the two armies.

Just before the second truce came into effect. Tel Aviv said its troops had made key gains surrounding Egyptian forces in the southern Sinai and cutting off Egypt's major petroleum port from the rest of the country.

UFOs? Ticket Them!

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit police have a full-fledged plan on the handling of creatures from unidentified flying objects.

A special group of officers has received the go-ahead to stop and frisk all aliens from other planets that are in the city or in the air space above.

In addition, the police can ticket creatures who attempt to flee or vanish.

In a seven-point departmental memo, Detroit's eight field duty inspectors were given detailed instructions on how to care for UFOs, their passengers and/or crews.

The top priority item said get them to the ground even if a bullhorn or public address system must be used. The next order of business was the traditional ticket for fleeing saucers, but with the proper copy of the citation to have on hand for future court appearances.

Diplomatic immunity for passengers or crew members of UFOs from alien planets was also required, including the separation of males and females for questioning.

Barrett Delays Gas Trip

BULLETIN

Premier Dave Barrett today postponed his planned meeting with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed following the announcement by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald that industrial users of natural gas in the B.C. interior will not have their supplies cut back by Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. as originally feared.

Times Staff

Premier Dave Barrett will make an emergency trip to Edmonton to arrange with Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed for alternative supplies of natural gas to ease this province's crisis shortage.

Barrett told the legislature Tuesday he would go to Alberta in the wake of refusal by the federal government to restrict exports of B.C. natural gas to U.S. customers, as the provincial government has demanded.

The first indication he would go east to secure a new source of natural gas for the province's industrial users came during debate in the house Tuesday of legislation setting up a powerful new petroleum corporation with authority to control the production and processing of natural gas and petroleum resources in the province.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald urged Barrett to go, saying direct contact with Lougheed is needed for B.C. to be able to get Alberta gas.

The natural gas shortage being felt in the province is the result of production problems encountered by Westcoast Transmission Company Limited, the principal supplier of natural gas in B.C.

Supplies in Alberta are available from two sources.

Oil Coats Park Beach

Oil up to two inches thick coated part of Stanley Park's shoreline today after an estimated 20 tons of bunker oil spilled into Vancouver harbor from the German-registered freighter Westfalia.

The spill, at Centennial Pier No. 4, was reported to Vancouver harbor master Capt. Roy Holland at 3:41 a.m.

A spokesman for Clean Seas of Canada said the firm was alerted to start a cleanup and contain the spill at 3:46 a.m.

But by 10:30 a.m. oil had coated some areas of the park's shoreline between Deadman Island and the Nine O'Clock Gun.

Oil was also reported off Lumbermen's Arch and the Clean Seas' spokesman said there were also unconfirmed reports of oil blobs in English Bay.

A thin sheen of oil was also visible east toward the Lion's Gate Bridge.

A crew of 25 men was attempting to clean the park's shoreline by hand and four tugs, hauling booms, were operating about 100 feet off Lumbermen's Arch.

The Clean Seas spokesman said the Westfalia was boomed off but a quantity of oil apparently escaped the immediate pier area as a result of a 15 to 20 mile-per-hour easterly wind whipping across the harbor.

"Conditions were very bad," he said.

A spokesman for Balfour Guthrie, agents for the Westfalia, said the oil apparently escaped from an air vent on the deck and spilled over the side into the sea.

He said the vent leads to one of the ship's oil tanks.

"It doesn't amount to very much, as far as we are concerned," he said.

A ministry of transport official said about a mile of the park's beach was affected. He said an aerial survey would be carried out to trace the movement of the crude bunker oil.

Ferry Contract To Seattle Firm

By LINDA HUGHES

Three new ferries, designed by a Seattle firm and costing a total of $35 million, will be operating in B.C. Ferries fleet by the summer of 1975. (See picture on Page 3.)

Transport Minister Robert Strachan said today a contract has been awarded for the design of two 376-car ferries and a trailer ferry capable of handling 64 commercial vehicles or 154 cars.

The two car ferries, expected to cost $13 million each, will be used on the proposed new Gabriola Island-Lower Mainland run, and the $9 million trailer ferry will provide 24-hour service on the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen run.

Nickum and Spaulding Associates Ltd. of Seattle were awarded the $577,500 design contract and have agreed to complete designs ready for construction tenders in two months.

The ships, all 457 feet in length, will be built in B.C. shipyards, Strachan said, and will involve nearly 900 jobs.

Strachan has been under fire in recent weeks from opposition members who predicted the design contract would go to the Seattle firm and demanded to know why Case Existological Laboratories of Victoria would not be given the lucrative contract.

Strachan was quick to outline to reporters today three reasons why the government decided against the Victoria firm, which was asked to submit a bid along with Nickum and Spaulding.

Time was an important factor, the minister said, and Case said it would take six months to draw up the de-

CANADA COSTS 'BARED'

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Quebec government documents on the province's gross national product and its balance of trade and payments show that Quebec has been a net exporter of capital and has received less from the federal government than it has paid in taxes, the Parti Quebecois claimed Tuesday. (See also Page 36.)

Party leader Rene Levesque and party economist Jacques Parizeau told a news conference that documents obtained from the provincial department of industry and commerce prove an independent Quebec would be a viable economic unit.

The documents, however, tell only part of the story, says Industry Minister Guy Saint-Pierre.

Their figures conflict with another government study and still have to be checked.

Nixon Delays Speech on TV

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Nixon today cancelled a planned televised speech to the nation because the White House said he was concentrating on trying to get a Middle East ceasefire.

He will hold a televised news conference Thursday night instead. Nixon had earlier scheduled a national address on Watergate developments and asked for TV time tonight.

The president spent the night at his Camp David retreat, reportedly preparing the speech explaining his decision to relinquish his Watergate recordings and his reasons for firing Archibald Cox as Watergate special prosecutor.

However, deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren later said Nixon spent Tuesday evening conferring by telephone with State Secretary Henry Kissinger and others on the attempt to arrange a firm Middle East ceasefire.

This took up the time that the President had set aside to write his speech, Warren added.

Nixon met Kissinger shortly after his return to Washington today and Warren said he would be devoting the balance of the day to the Middle East.

Meanwhile, the House of Representatives continued today a preliminary impeachment inquiry, begun Tuesday just before Nixon's lawyers announced that the tapes would be given to a federal judge.

House leaders said the inquiry will continue at least

GAS BILL PASSES HURDLE

The NDP government, acting to avert a major natural gas shortage this winter, won approval in principle to legislation allowing for the control of all gas and oil supplies produced in B.C.

Leading debate on the Petroleum Corporation Act (Bill 70), which passed second reading 32 to 15, Premier Dave Barrett and Attorney-General Alex Macdonald reiterated past declarations the people of B.C. are entitled to a fair return on their resources.

Opposition reaction was generally negative with arguments put forward that once again too much power is being concentrated in the hands of a government-appointed body.

Both Barrett and Macdonald said the province is losing as much as $100 million a year because of an underpricing of natural gas sold to foreign interests. The new petroleum corporation would be empowered to do something about this by raising the wellhead price of the resource, to 58 cents per thousand cubic feet instead of the present 37 cents.

Macdonald said decisions affecting the economic development of B.C. have been made for too long in the board rooms of foreign corporations.

Barrett was even more blunt. "It is our resource and we must husband that resource for the benefit of the people of B.C., it's as simple as that."

Immigrant Deadline Stays

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will not extend the period under which illegal immigrants may seek landed-immigrant status, Immigration Minister Robert Andras said Tuesday.

The special 60-day period when illegal immigrants could make application for landed status ended Oct. 15 but Andras received representations from inside and outside the Commons for an extension.

The minister said that 33 applications for landed status were received after the deadline. He said some were permitted for compassionate reasons but added that this should not be taken as an extension of the 60-day period.

Asked if illegal immigrants now will be deported, Andras said the law will be enforced.

But outside the House, Mr. Andras assured reporters there would not be a witch hunt to track down illegal immigrants.

NOOSE BAN STAYS

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons voted 119 to 106 today to limit capital punishment to killers of on-duty policemen and prison guards for another five years.

The vote was free, meaning MPs were not tied to party loyalties.

The proposal now needs only Senate approval and routine royal assent to become law.

A similar hanging ban was approved in 1967 and expired last December. In sometimes dramatic sittings, the Commons spent more than 50 hours since January debating the government bill to extend the ban.

It had been obvious from the start that the government headed by Prime Minister Trudeau wanted to end all capital punishment.

But it realized early that the best it could hope for was renewal of the previous five-year ban.

B.C. Rail Workers Voting

Close to 400 B.C. Rail tradesmen were voting today on a recommended settlement to their 10-day strike. If they accept the new contract, trains could be running Thursday.

No details of the tentative settlement, arrived at in negotiations late Tuesday, were released but union leaders recommended acceptance.

Premier Barrett, who is also president of B.C. Rail, told a cheering legislature at 6 p.m. Tuesday of the tentative settlement.

He said renewed negotiations, set up earlier in the day, had brought about the tentative agreement.

The 383 carmen, machinists, electricians and pipefitters were on strike to improve an offer ranging between 35.8 and 38 per cent over 31 months from last Jan. 1. That offer would have brought a journeyman's wage to $6.10 an hour.

TWO CAN PAY —BUILDER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada says builders are justified in charging high prices for houses because most families have two pay cheques and can afford the price.

Keith Morely also said immediate removal of federal and provincial sales taxes on building materials would not cut the price of a new house because "the main factor in the price is the demand."

BROKE HIJACKERS GROUNDED

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Four airplane hijackers, promised safe conduct to Cuba in exchange for releasing their hostages, wound up in custody today because they couldn't come up with the money to buy airline tickets to Havana.

A government spokesman said the safe conduct guarantee did not include cash for the flight out of Bolivia.

The four hijackers, two men and two women claiming to be members of the Uruguay's urban guerrilla Tupamaro movement, were told they were free to leave the country Tuesday when they released five hostages from the Aerolinas Argentinas Boeing 737 jetliner they hijacked over Argentina.

The airliner arrived Saturday at Yacubia, 500 miles from the Argentine border. After 53 hours of negotiations, in which they released 38 of the passengers and crew but threatened to kill the remaining five, the hijackers agreed to release their hostages for the safe conduct pledge.

Until they find the money to buy airline tickets, officials said Tuesday, the four will stay in a military camp in La Paz under heavy guard.

Bolivian officials said the four commandeered the plane over Salta, Argentina, by threatening to blow it up with plastic bombs later found to be fakes filled with wastepaper. But the hijackers were armed with three small revolvers and a rifle.
